INTRODUCTION.

LETTER-BOOK C may be said, roughly speaking, to cover the period extending from A.D. 1291 to A.D. 1309, a period covered jointly by the two previous Letter-Books. The year in which the record commences found King Edward I. in sore trouble. He had recently lost his wife, and this loss was quickly followed by the death of his mother, Eleanor, wife of Henry III., who for a time enjoyed the profits and emoluments arising from the Wardenship of London Bridge, to the great chagrin of the citizens, and proved herself the friend and benefactor of the Friars of the Penance,<sup>1</sup> and the enemy of the Jews. The expulsion of the Jews from England in 1290, ascribed to her instigation—backed though it was by the will of the majority of the nation—had served to increase the King's difficulties, and had driven him to resort more than ever to the Lombard merchants for pecuniary assistance. Hence his unpopularity with the citizens, who loved not the foreigner in their midst, and hence "an accumulation of popular discontent which showed itself in the King's lifetime by opposition to his mercantile policy, and after his death supplied one of the most efficient means for the overthrow of his son."<sup>2</sup> The City was still "in the King's hand," having been in that unenviable position—governed by a Custos or Warden of the King's choosing in the place of a Mayor elected by the free will of the citizens—ever since the year 1285, and was destined to remain so for seven years more. Under such circumstances, it is small matter for surprise if the citizens kept a tight hold upon their pursestrings, and satisfied the King's demands, whether by way of loans, tallages, customs, or otherwise, grudgingly. The fine of 20,000 marks demanded from the City by his father as long ago as the year 1266 for the purchase of his pardon for trespasses committed, or "reputed" to have been committed, by the citizens during the Barons' war,<sup>1</sup> was paid by driblets to one or the other of the King's nominees, and a large portion of it remained unsatisfied as late as 1302.<sup>2</sup>

The King's difficulties were increased by war with France, forced upon him by the French King. Attacks and reprisals between the Cinque Ports and the Normans in 1293, followed by a war between the Gascons and the French, led to Edward's fiefs in France being declared forfeited to the French Crown, and he was compelled to prepare for war. These preparations were delayed by further trouble with Wales and Scotland. At length, in 1295, John le Bretun, the King's Warden of the City, announced to the assembled citizens the King's requirements, or rather commands, in accordance with which they agreed that three ships should sail in the King's service, together with other ships from the Cinque Ports, at the charge of the citizens. The term of service was limited to three weeks. The vessels are particularized as the ship of Newcastle, the ship of Richard de Chiggewelle and Adam de Fulham, and the ship of Alexander Pyk and Thomas de Bolonia. The funds necessary for the undertaking were to be raised by a tax of twopence in the pound on chattels and merchandise "according to the taxation of the sixth penny." The Warden himself advanced the City the sum of £40 on the personal security of the Aldermen and six of the inhabitants of each Ward.<sup>3</sup> At the close of the previous year special precautions of this fine before the Barons of the Exchequer. Vide infra, pp. 1, 2, 4, 7, 8, and pp. 228-37.

had been taken for safeguarding the City, the Warden, Sheriffs, and Aldermen (among the last named being the Prior of Holy Trinity, Christchurch, of whom more later on) taking their turns to patrol the streets by night.<sup>1</sup>

Although the Cinque Port fleet, which had been taken in hand and to some extent organized by the King, succeeded in certain reprisals on the French coast, it could not save the south coast of England from being harried by French mariners, who effected a landing at Dover and burnt a great part of the town. The task of defending this coast devolved upon the King's son, Edward of Carnarvon, the King himself being busy reducing Scotland. In March, 1296, the King directed a writ of Privy Seal to the City from Holy Island (or Lindisfarne, lying off the coast of Northumberland), bidding the citizens to display the same ready obedience to his son as they would to himself. This was quickly followed by another writ from Berwick, informing the citizens that he had communicated his wishes at that juncture to John de Metingham, Ralph de Sandwich, and John le Bretun, and that their orders were to be implicitly obeyed and executed.<sup>2</sup>

In reply, the King was informed that forty horsemen, fully caparisoned, and fifty "arbalesters," or crossbow men, besides footmen (absque peditibus), had been dispatched for service under his son the Prince, for the space of four weeks. As for the City's own defence, to which allusion had been made in one of the writs, the authorities promised to see to it, more especially as the streets were at the time so much overrun with foreigners of doubtful character, of whose presence in the City they would gladly get quit, if only the King would give them leave to do so.<sup>3</sup> After this gentle rap at the King for his encouragement of foreigners, they concluded with an assurance of their willingness to render yet further assistance should circumstances at any time demand it.

This military contingent was not voted without some opposition. When the King's demands came up for consideration a proposal made by Ralph de Sandwich (then Warden or Constable of the Tower), John le Bretun, Warden of the City,<sup>1</sup> and the Aldermen, was at first opposed by John de Dowgate, Nicholas Pycot, and Geoffrey de Conduit, men of substance and repute in the City.<sup>2</sup> They were soon won over, however, and agreed to join the military force in person. The question, moreover, as to the number of men to be sent lay for some time in the balance. The day after the individuals just named had signified their readiness to join the force, the Aldermen and fifty-two leading citizens, whose names are set out in the Letter-Book, met together to consider the matter; and it was then decided that twenty horsemen should be sent for a service of four weeks, each horseman to receive the sum of twenty marks for his expenses during that time, and the money was to be raised by a tax on the inhabitants of each Ward to the extent of "a third part of the seventh penny granted to the lord the King."<sup>3</sup> Before, however, the City's answer to the King's writs was sent, more liberal counsel prevailed, and the number of the City's force was more than doubled. Edward, who acknowledged the City's reply from Roxburgh, expressed himself as gratified with the liberality of the citizens, and, referring to their complaint respecting the presence of foreigners in the City, told them that they might take any measures they thought proper for the safety of the City and the realm, provided they <sup>1</sup> They are recorded in the 'Liber Custumarum' (fo. 44) as joint Wardens (Custodum Londoniarum), whilst a few lines afterwards only one of them appears as Warden (Custodis). In the Letter-Book the abbreviated form Custod may stand for the singular or the plural. Sandwich, being at the time Custos or Warden of the Tower, may have been known also as Warden of London.

<sup>2</sup> Both Pycot and Geoffrey de Conduit became Aldermen, whilst the former was for some time Chamberlain of the City. Of John de Dowgate little is known, but one of his name appears to have been appointed with others in or about 1299 to confer with the Mayor and Aldermen on certain matters affecting the City's liberties. See 'Cal. Letter-Book B,' p. 74.

acted under the advice of John de Metingham, John le Bretun, and Ralph de Sandwich, and let the King know at once what had been done.<sup>1</sup>

Having exhausted his supplies in reducing Scotland, Edward found himself compelled to summon another Parliament in 1296 before setting out for the Continent. The writ was dated 26 August from Berwick,<sup>2</sup> and the Parliament was to meet at Bury St. Edmund on the morrow of All Souls [2 Nov.]. The writ and elections thereon as recorded in the Letter-Book<sup>3</sup> are of more than ordinary interest, inasmuch as, with the exception of London, no details of the election of any city or borough members of this period have come down to us.<sup>4</sup> The writ, we learn, was directed to the Warden and Sheriffs of the City on Wednesday before the Feast of St. Michael, and in pursuance of it Stephen Aschewy or Eswy and William de Hereford were elected by the whole body of Aldermen and four men from each Ward to represent the City, a sum of 20s. apiece being voted them for their expenses. On Monday after the Feast of St. Edward the King [13 Oct.] the commonalty appear to have been again called together, viz., six of the best and most discreet men from each Ward (and not four, as on the previous occasion), and by them the election was repeated and (apparently) confirmed; the commonalty answering for the persons so elected by sureties, viz., Richer le Mercer (otherwise known as Richer de Refham), Richard Poterel, John le Coffrer, and Gilbert de la March.

This double election is peculiar. Comparing it with borough elections, Dr. Stubbs remarks<sup>5</sup>: "Whether these two gatherings in the case of London correspond with the two processes which must have taken place in the election of borough members, it would be rash to determine. In the latter case it must be supposed that the members were nominated in the borough assembly, or that delegates were appointed in that assembly to elect them, and a return thereon made to the Sheriff before the election was made in the county court. The proceedings before the Sheriff seem to be the election or report of nomination by the citizens and burghers, the manucaption or production of two sureties for each of the elected persons, and the deliverance by act or letter of full powers to act on behalf of the community which elected them." Strictly speaking, no return appears to have been made to the writ in this case. There is no record here of any notification of the result of the election, by letter or commissio, being sent to the King as in other cases, as, for instance, the election of 1300.<sup>1</sup>

The outcome of the Parliament proved unsatisfactory<sup>2</sup> to the King, who found himself forced to resort to arbitrary measures. In April, 1297, he caused all the wool and woofels of the country to be carried to the seaports for transportation, and in the following month a writ was directed to the "Sheriffs and Aldermen" of London (the City being still "in the King's hand"), bidding them elect some responsible person to go to Flanders with others appointed elsewhere for the same purpose, and there sell the wool and hides so seized and appropriated. Thereupon, John atte Gate was elected.<sup>3</sup> At length, in the following August, the King himself embarked for Flanders, leaving behind him his son Edward as regent.

No sooner was his back turned than the barons and the citizens united their forces to compel a removal of their grievances, and first of all, the unlawful seizure or "prise" of wool, and so successful were they that by the end of the month this particular grievance was abolished by Royal Proclamation,<sup>1</sup> and six weeks later the Prince conceded all demands.

During this critical time the City had been in a parlous state, and special steps had been taken for prevention of outrage and for the preservation of the peace. A Fair recently established in Soper Lane (now Queen Street, Cheapside), and known as the "Nane" (or Noon) Fair,<sup>2</sup> from its being held in the afternoon, was abolished, owing to its being the resort of thieves and cut-purses. This was in June. Towards the close of July, when the differences between the King and the barons were fast drawing to a head, the defence of the several gates of the City was allotted to the various wards.<sup>3</sup> On 21 September the Warden and Aldermen were summoned to appear before the Prince Regent at the palace of the Bishop of London, near St. Paul's, when certain instructions for safeguarding the City were delivered to Sir John de Banquelle and Sir Stephen Eswy, two Aldermen, and to Sir Henry le Galeys, who appears to have been present in some superior capacity. These instructions were to the effect that steps were to be taken for securing the City's gates, for discovering those of the inhabitants capable of bearing arms, and for securing the streets with barriers and chains where necessary, and especially in the vicinity of the Thames and the Black Friars. All vessels in the river were to be moored on the City's side, and the City walls were to be repaired. The two Aldermen just named were to see these instructions carried into effect, whilst Sir Henry le Galeys (as some one in superior authority) was to give the necessary orders and see that they were properly executed.<sup>4</sup> In consequence of these instructions fresh orders were given (3 Oct.) by John le Bretun, the Warden, and the Aldermen for safeguarding the river and City gates, the duty being allotted to the several wards. The Thames east of London Bridge was committed to Tower Ward and Billingsgate Ward, whilst that part of the river which lay to the west of the bridge was entrusted to the Wards of Vintry, Queenhithe, and Castle Baynard. The merchants of Almaine (not mentioned in the previous order for keeping the gates) were to take their share in guarding Bishopsgate.<sup>1</sup> At the end of November John le Bretun summoned a large assembly of Aldermen and citizens, and after a few preliminary remarks as to the duties imposed upon him by the Prince Regent and his Council—namely, that he should preserve the ancient liberties and customs of the City, and in every way bear himself as if he were Mayor instead of Warden, until further orders from the King, who was then in Flanders—proceeded to repeal certain orders made during the Mayoralty of Henry le Galeys [1281-2], which, however obnoxious they may have been to dishonest millers and bakers, were undoubtedly conducive to the public good. Botolph Wharf was at the same time restored to the City.<sup>2</sup>

In these concessions one may discern a symptom of a better relationship springing up between the King and the City. This proved to be the case. On the King's return to England in the following March (1298) the citizens voted him a sum of money,<sup>3</sup> and on the 9th April the Aldermen and a deputation of twelve commoners were summoned to Westminster to attend the King, who restored to the citizens the right of being governed by a Mayor of their own choice. No time was lost in electing to the Mayoralty chair Henry le Galeys, who had already served the City so well, and he was in due course presented to the King and admitted and sworn before the Barons of the Exchequer.<sup>4</sup> When the Feast of SS. Simon and Jude [28 Oct.]—the customary date of election of Mayor at this period—came round he was again elected, being admitted before Ralph de

The favour shown by Edward to foreign merchants, although springing out of necessity,<sup>2</sup> rather than from any special liking he entertained for them, was, nevertheless, distasteful to the London citizen. The foreign trader was never welcome in the City, although large bodies of them from various parts of the Continent obtained a foothold in London as early as the time of Ethelred II. [A.D. 979-1016]. The chief of these were the so-called "Emperor's men," or "merchants of the Hanse of Almaine," known at an earlier period under the name of "Easterlings." These, as well as a body of merchants from Cologne, obtained certain trading privileges<sup>3</sup> in the City at an early date, the two bodies having each its own Guildhall situate near Dowgate, where another body of merchants from Rouen had been in possession of a port or dock from the days of Edward the Confessor.<sup>4</sup>

Coming to later times, we find a considerable amount of freedom accorded to merchant strangers by order of Edward I. at the time when the City was in his hand. They were not to be molested in any way, and might unload and warehouse their goods where they thought fit, so long as the King's estate was not allowed to suffer. The foreign merchant, moreover, if of good character, could claim admittance to the franchise; but this, again, only on condition that he be ready to bear his share of tallage and other charges made on the City.<sup>5</sup> On the other hand, no foreigner or stranger was allowed to keep hostel in the City, unless a freeman and able to produce good credentials.<sup>6</sup> This ordinance was

<sup>2</sup> "From the very day of his accession," writes Bishop Stubbs, "Edward was financially in the hands of the Lombard bankers.....But more than this: Edward's pecuniary exigencies forced him to the invention or development of a great system of customs duties, in the collection of which he had to employ foreign agents."—'Chron. frequently infringed, as witness the precepts to certain "Teutonic" merchants, or merchants of Almaine, and others in 1300, forbidding them in future to hold hostels for bed and board, and warning them to betake themselves to the hostels of freemen under pain of losing all their movables.<sup>1</sup>

The same year the King, who by this time must have been tolerably conversant with City customs, addressed a writ of certiorari to the Mayor and Sheriffs as to the reason why merchants of Bordeaux were not permitted to hire and inhabit hostels in the City, as had been their wont, and why they were called upon to pay twopence a cask of wine by way of pontage. The return made to this writ discloses the favour shown by the King to foreign merchants during the time the City remained in his hand. It was to the effect that neither merchants of Bordeaux nor any other foreign merchants whatsoever were wont to hire and inhabit hostels in London at a time when the City was in possession of its full franchise (as now it was, by the King's favour), nor to have other foreigners living in their house or entertained at their table. Nevertheless, they were permitted to hold cellars and warehouses for storing their wine and other merchandise for a term according to the custom.<sup>2</sup> This return was not enough for the King, who a few weeks later sought to be informed whether Bordeaux merchants were permitted to reside on the premises where they stored their merchandise, and for how long, &c. To this the City replied that no foreign merchants were allowed to reside on premises hired for storing merchandise, nor to receive others there, but they ought to reside in the houses of freemen, for a term of forty days and no more, so that they sell their wares within that time.<sup>3</sup> This limitation of his stay in the City was one of the greatest hardships that the foreigner and the stranger had to bear. The hardship was all the greater because the restriction was not always known to the merchant or trader until he had already resided some time in the City. Thus we find the plea of ignorance of any such custom of the City set up from time to time.<sup>1</sup> On one occasion the offenders appear to have been asked if they were in any way connected with the "Hanse" of Amiens, Corbie, and Nesle, and had to confess (no doubt with some reluctance) that they were in no way associated with it. Had it been otherwise, all might have been well with them, for in 1237 the merchants of that Hanse had succeeded in obtaining extensive trading privileges in the City, in return for a yearly ferm of 50 marks to be paid to the Sheriffs, and among these privileges was one which permitted any associate or companion (compaignoun) of the merchants to set up a hostel in the City for receiving his fellow-merchants, if he so desired, provided his stay did not exceed one whole year.<sup>2</sup> At the time we are now speaking of the Hanse was in bad plight, and unable to pay its ferm. Its trade with the City had on that account fallen off. In order to encourage them to come and traffic freely with the citizens, as of old, a proposal was made by Henry le Galeys (who had recently regained the Mayoralty chair) to remit to the merchants of the Hanse a portion of their arrears.<sup>3</sup> This indulgence apparently had but little effect, for the same Mayor is recorded as having distrained for the rent. Strange to say, he refused to hand the money over to the Sheriffs, as he ought to have done, and for this delinquency he was called to account before the Barons of the Exchequer.<sup>4</sup>

At a somewhat earlier date, viz., A.D. 1293—when the City was still in the King's hand—certain merchants of Provence, being questioned by the Warden and Aldermen as to the nature of their claim to traffic in the City, and whether they enjoyed any privilege of residence or exemption from custom granted them by the King, declared that Provençal traders enjoyed no such grant by the King, nor did they claim any extraordinary privileges by land or water, but only (like other foreigners) to sell by wholesale to the great ones (magnatibus) of the land and to freemen of the City, and not otherwise.<sup>5</sup> No one who was not a freeman was permitted to sell by retail.<sup>6</sup>

The reason why these Provençal merchants were called upon to declare explicitly their exact status in the City may possibly be found in the fact that the wine merchants of Gascony had recently succeeded, after long dissension with the civic authorities, in obtaining the permission of Parliament to carry on their trade in the City on the same terms as the merchants of Provence (Mercatores provinciales).<sup>1</sup> Having obtained a foothold in the City, these Gascon traders appear to have lived largely on credit, and the King found himself bound a few years later (1299) to discharge their debts to citizens for the necessaries of life.<sup>2</sup> The sum total of the indebtedness of these Gascons did not amount to much more than £1,000, and yet the King found it inconvenient to raise this comparatively small amount without applying to the City. This, no doubt, he did with less hesitation, seeing that he had so recently restored to the citizens their Mayor. The security offered was unexceptionable, being no less than the City's ferm, and all moneys that could possibly be demanded for the King's use by summons of the Exchequer.

One of the great evils resulting to the City of London and the kingdom at large from the influx of foreigners during Edward's reign was the depreciation of the coinage. Gold and silver were exported by them in large quantities, and the country became flooded with coin which was either clipped or counterfeit. We can trace through the pages of the Letter-Book the attempts made to remedy the evil, which in 1298 had become so great that the acceptance of the current coin of the realm by the inhabitants of the City had to be insisted on by the Barons of the Exchequer.<sup>3</sup> Money-changers (chiefly foreigners) were forbidden to practise their usurious trade, such business being restricted to the King's Exchange at the Tower.<sup>4</sup>

The "merchants of Almaine," who have been already mentioned as enjoying exceptional privileges in the City, and whose chartered rights had been confirmed by Edward in 1281,<sup>1</sup> were discovered in 1299 to have so far abused their privileges as to avow goods that were not their own, and expose them for sale without submitting them to the view of the Sheriffs. By so doing they not only defrauded the King of his customs, but afforded opportunity for the importation and circulation of bad money,<sup>2</sup> in violation of a recent ordinance. This ordinance, or statute,<sup>3</sup> was passed in May of this year (1299), and prescribed the penalty of death for those discovered importing base money into the country. This extreme penalty, however, was not to be enforced before Midsummer Day next, in order that time might be given for making known the purport of the statute to merchants abroad.<sup>4</sup> There was reason in this. On the other hand, it is difficult to understand why the King should order the release of those who had been put under arrest a few months later by his own Commissioners for making a business of exporting sterling money and importing coins of inferior value known as "pollards" and "crocards," which they proceeded again to exchange for sterling for the purpose of sending abroad.<sup>5</sup> Nor can it be said that his attempt to stop the circulation of base money by an arbitrary order that "pollards" and "crocards" should no longer pass as of the value of a penny, but of a halfpenny, i.e., two for a "sterling,"<sup>6</sup> was economically a wise one, for it chiefly served to enhance the price of provisions.<sup>7</sup> Far wiser was the order which immediately followed, viz., that no attempt should be made to melt down and refine base money, but that it should all be brought to the King's Exchange at the Tower, and there exchanged.<sup>8</sup>

<sup>3</sup> Known as the Statutum de Falsa Moneta. This statute took the form of a writ addressed to the various Sheriffs; that to the Mayor and Sheriffs of London appears to have borne date 5 May, 1299 (infra, p. 42, but cf. p. 43); whilst that directed to the Sheriff of Somerset and Dorset was dated 15 May. 'Statutes at Large,' i. 145.

On 28 January (1300) the Mayor and Sheriffs were for the second time ordered to see that "pollards" and "crocards" passed current at their reduced value. We have two instances before us of debtors attempting to discharge their liabilities in "pollards," one of them occurring shortly before the date of the order, and the other immediately after.<sup>1</sup> In the first case the creditors refused the money, which was handed to the Chamberlain provisionally; in the second, the tender by the debtors of "pollards" instead of "sterlings" was declared to be contrary to the "new statute." Every effort was made to enforce the order of 28 January, the Serjeants of the Wards being sworn to arrest any one refusing to accept two "pollards" for the penny sterling,<sup>2</sup> but to little effect; and shortly afterwards the use of "pollards," "crocards," and similar coins was absolutely forbidden.<sup>3</sup>

Although the foreign merchants were the chief transgressors in draining the country of gold,<sup>4</sup> they found favour with the King for having assented, as they did in 1303, to an increase of custom, in return for which he removed the restrictions hitherto placed on their sojourn in the City, and granted them other extensive liberties.<sup>5</sup> To get the merchant stranger, however, to grant him an increase of custom on wine, wool, and other commodities, was one thing, but to obtain the consent of the denizen trader to any such increase was another and more difficult matter for the King.

On 16 April (1303) he took the preliminary step of summoning representatives of every Italian trading company in the City to meet him at York,<sup>6</sup> and having obtained their consent to the New Custom, he issued writs on 7 May for the attendance of "two or three" citizens of London and representatives of forty-two other cities and boroughs at the same place. The proposal, being submitted to them, was unanimously rejected, the representatives declaring that they would only give assent to the ancient and usual customs.<sup>7</sup> One reason why the citizens of London refused assent may probably be found in a clause of the statute De Nova Custuma, which changed the method of weighing goods at the King's Beam, by introducing a measure of fairness between buyer and seller hitherto unknown. A custom had long prevailed in the City that when it came to weighing merchandise bought and sold the buyer should be allowed a "draft" or overplus to the extent of four pounds in every hundredweight.<sup>1</sup> This was now abolished by the King's order. Before weighing, the Beam (statera) was to be viewed by both buyer and seller; the arms of the balance were to be exactly even, and when in that position the weigher was to remove his hands from them.<sup>2</sup> To this provision the citizens offered a stout resistance, pleading the custom of the City in answer to a writ directed to them in October, 1305. To a second writ which speedily followed, commanding them to do as bidden or else appear before the King at Westminster, the return was short and to the point—viz., they would attend on the day named.<sup>3</sup> The result of the interview is not recorded in the Letter-Book.

Notwithstanding the prompt action of the City of London and other cities and boroughs in opposing the New Custom, serving, as it no doubt did, to check the King's scheme of providing himself with an additional revenue from denizens, he was determined to make the most of what had been so complacently granted by the foreigners. He appears, however, to have experienced some trouble, at least with the City, in the matter of appointing collectors of the new duties. He was willing that their appointment should be made by the citizens, but the latter showed no anxiety to proceed to any such election. When a writ, dated from York 19 November (1303), arrived, bidding the Mayor and Aldermen to elect two collectors of the new duty on wool, woolfels, and skins, to be presented before the Barons of the Exchequer at York, the return made was to the effect that the writ had arrived so late that it could not be executed! More than this, it informed the King's Treasurer that his messenger had been placed under arrest for his negligence!<sup>1</sup> In the following February (1304) another writ for the appointment of collectors received a reply that the collectors of the custom had hitherto been appointed by the King and his Council, and the citizens had never appointed such officers.<sup>2</sup> On 1 April we find the King appointing Richer de Refham and Hugh Pourte,<sup>3</sup> who, if not collectors also of the old custom at the time, became collectors of both the old and the new custom shortly afterwards. On 27 June the civic authorities were warned by Walter (de) Langton, the King's Treasurer, to render the collectors every assistance in the exercise of their office.<sup>4</sup> The opposition of the English merchants to the New Custom continued without abatement. In 1309 (under a new king) the matter came before Parliament, when they were hopeful of victory. The proceedings ended, however, only in a suspension of the New Custom,<sup>5</sup> and it was not until two years later that the statute De Nova Custuma was declared illegal, and peace once more reigned.

An important and perhaps not the least interesting feature of the Letter-Book is the transcript of charters and other documents relating to the early history of the Priory of Holy Trinity (or Christchurch), Aldgate, and the "English Cnihtengild. They are entered (for the most part) towards the end of the book<sup>6</sup> by later and (possibly) different hands, but three of the documents are recorded in the earlier part of the volume.<sup>7</sup> To some there are marginal references to books marked "A" and "B" in the custody of the Prior, suggesting the possibility of the documents having been copied into the Letter-Book from original sources. However this may be, the handwriting may fairly be ascribed to the fifteenth century, or about the time when Thomas de Axebrigge (son of John de Cornubia), a

Canon of Christchurch, compiled a cartulary of the Priory. This he did in 1425—being moved to set in order the title-deeds of the Priory by reason of its being at that time in reduced circumstances and forced to sell most of its property; and this cartulary now rests in the Hunterian Museum at Glasgow. It was consulted by Stow for his ‘Survey,’ who refers to it as “the book of the late house of the Holy Trinity.” The compiler, like Stow, was cognizant of the City’s Letter-Books, for he remarks that certain charters that he sets out are enrolled at the end of a “book of memoranda” in the Guildhall, “with the letter C.”

It has been said, indeed, that the details given in the Letter-Book were transcribed from the cartulary,<sup>1</sup> but of this I confess to entertaining considerable doubt. I have not consulted the cartulary itself, but only a modern transcript<sup>2</sup> of it preserved in the Guildhall Library; and a careful collation of the record in the Letter-Book with that of the transcript discovers so many discrepancies, that one is led to the belief that they were derived from separate and independent sources.

A letter from Dr. Tanner (afterwards Bishop of St. Asaph, and author of ‘Notitia Monastica’) to John Anstis (Garter King-of-Arms) in 1713, a copy of which is prefixed to the cartulary, shows that Axebrigge’s work was at that time the property of the worthy herald, who appears to have lent it to Tanner, with the view, no doubt, of assisting him in the compilation of his ‘Notitia.’<sup>3</sup> How it came into the possession of Anstis we are left to conjecture. In another letter addressed to him by Tanner seven years later (13 February, 1720)<sup>4</sup> the writer promises to return “the Trinity Book” in his list of authorities for the Priory (‘Not. Monast.’ p. 304), thus: “Cartularium hujus prioratus MS. penes V. cl. rei heraldicæ et patriarum antiquitatum peritissimum Joannem Anstis arm. regem armorum principalem titulo Garter.”

<sup>2</sup> This transcript (with translation) consists of four volumes, and is known as MS. No. 122. The transcript was apparently made about the year 1769, and passed into the hands of the Corporation with other transcripts of records affecting the City collected by Edward Tyrrell, a former City Remembrancer.

<sup>4</sup> An extract from this letter is also prefixed to the Guildhall transcript, but the place from which it was dated is omitted. In the Hunterian volume, a week or ten days. Finding Stephen Batman's name on one of the leaves, he expresses surprise at its having escaped getting into the Library of Bennet College (now known as Corpus Christi College, Cambridge), inasmuch as Batman (who at one time was a minister at Newington Butts, co. Surrey) was a great book-collector, and, on his own confession, procured nearly 7,000 volumes for Archbishop Parker, who gave them to the College. The mention of Batman's name as appearing on one of the pages of the cartulary is curious, for (according to Dugdale) Tanner refers to two cartularies of Holy Trinity Priory, viz., the one (already set out in note supra, p. xvii) in the possession of John Anstis, and the other as having been at different times in the possession of Dr. "Bateman" and Thomas Astle, and as being at the time of writing in the Hunterian Museum.<sup>1</sup> No statement to this effect, however, appears in his schedule of authorities relating to the Priory in Tanner's 'Notitia.' It is curious, too, that in his reference to the cartulary once in the possession of Anstis, Tanner makes no mention of it as being in the Hunterian Museum. More curious still is it that, if there be indeed two cartularies, and both passed through the hands of Dr. Batman, they should both have found their way to the Hunterian Museum, Glasgow, instead of to the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge.<sup>2</sup>

The story of the foundation of the English Cnihtengild and its subsequent absorption by the Priory of Holy Trinity, Aldgate, as set out in the Letter-Book (and printed infra in the original Latin and Anglo-Saxon), may here be briefly told. In the time of Cnut, or (according to Axebrigge's cartulary) in the earlier days of Edgar, there were thirteen "cnihts" or however (as Dr. John Young, the Keeper of the Museum, kindly informs me), this also, like the former letter, was dated from Norwich, Tanner being at the time rector of Thorpe, near Norwich, whilst enjoying also a canony of Ely.

p. 151) are as follows: "Chartularium olim penes Doct. Bateman, postea penes Thomam Astle, arm. et nunc in Museo cl. Gulielmi Hunter, M.D."

military retainers such as the King loved, who had set their heart upon a plot of ground which had become derelict through excessive charges being made upon it. This they desired of the King, together with a further grant of a licence to form themselves into a gild. And here comes into the story a touch of romance. The King signified his readiness to grant both requests, but on condition that each of them should be victor in three separate combats, viz., one above ground, one underground, and one in water; and further, that on a day to be named they should be prepared to meet all comers with the lance in the field called East Smithfield. All these conditions, we are told, the knights fulfilled and came off victorious, and forthwith the King declared them a "Knytte-gild" and defined the limits of their manorial jurisdiction or soke.

Next we have on record a charter of Edward the Confessor, recorded, it must be allowed, in very indifferent Anglo-Saxon. The charter was granted some time between A.D. 1042 (the date of the Confessor's accession) and A.D. 1044, the date ascribed for the death of Ælfward, Bishop of London (to whom the charter is addressed in conjunction with Wulfgar the Portreeve), and it confirmed to the gild all the franchises it enjoyed in the days of the Confessor's father (Ethelred), Cnut, and Edgar.

The late Mr. H. C. Coote, who examined and collated these documents, as entered in the City's 'Liber Dunthorn' as well as in the Letter-Book, for a paper he was preparing on 'The English Gild of Knights and their Socn'<sup>1</sup> in the year 1879, was careful to warn the reader against placing too implicit a faith in the historical accuracy of the account of the rise of the gild as there given; one reason for exercising caution being the fact that "no English king before the Norman Conquest ever exercised the right of licensing a gild. Every gild was then perfectly legal without royal authority. It required no other formality than the consent of its members to form and constitute it."

The gild's possessions and franchises as enjoyed under Edward the Confessor were successively confirmed by charters of William I., William II., and Henry I. In the course of the reign of the last-mentioned king the members of the gild appear suddenly to have taken a religious turn, and the gild came to an end, or rather extinguished itself, in the following remarkable manner. Struck by the immense success and popularity of the Priory of Holy Trinity, recently founded and richly endowed with the soke of Aldgate and other possessions by Queen Matilda,<sup>1</sup> certain descendants "from the ancient race of noble English knights"—fifteen in number, whose names have been handed down to us—solemnly met together in the chapter-house of Christchurch, one day in the year 1125, and gave to that church (itself a portion of the Queen's gift) and the canons thereof the land and soke called the "Anglisshe Cnithegild," situate outside Aldgate and extending down to the Thames. At the same time these fifteen benefactors as well as their predecessors were solemnly admitted by Norman the Prior as members of the confraternity and partakers of all its benefits.<sup>2</sup> Then followed the legal formality of the ancient "feoffment with livery of seisin in deed," which required that both parties should go to the property about to be conveyed, and that the feoffor should there deliver some portion of it, great or small, to the feoffee. After offering up the various charters—the title-deeds of the property—on the altar of Christchurch, the parties in this case proceeded to the church of St. Botolph without Aldgate, situate within the soke, and indeed the most distinguishing feature of the soke (et est, ut aiunt, capud ipsius terre), and by formal delivery of the church the benefactors made over the whole of their property to the Priory.

<sup>2</sup> As shown by Mr. Horace Round ('The Commune of London,' p. 104), this was no more than "the usual admission of benefactors to a share in the spiritual benefits appertaining to the brotherhood." They did not necessarily dedicate themselves to a conventual life, as some have supposed, although at least one of the fifteen, viz., Orgar le Prude, appears to have done so, for he is described as "Monachus" early in Stephen's reign, in a document set out by Mr. Round (ibid., p. 100).

The names of some of the members of this self-sacrificing Cnihtengild deserve a passing notice. Ralph, son of Algod, who heads the list, also heads a list of a number of witnesses to certain proceedings which took place in 1137 touching encroachments made on the newly acquired property of the Priory by various Wardens of the Tower.<sup>1</sup> He also appears as an Alderman of the City, or (as Mr. Round prefers to put it) "in charge of one of the City wards," in the remarkable schedule of lands (or "terrier") belonging to St. Paul's<sup>2</sup> in the several wards of the City temp. Henry I., and, further, he is (in the opinion of Mr. Round,<sup>3</sup> who has given much study to these worthy citizens) the same Ralf, son of Algod, who appears as a Canon of St. Paul's in 1104 and 1132.

For the comparatively little that is known of Orgar "le Prude" or "the Proud" (Lat. Prudus) and the rest of the members of the Cnihtengild at the time of its voluntary extinction, we have again to call in the assistance of Mr. Round. "Orgar" is one of the commonest names found in the muniments of St. Paul's. Mr. Round enumerates seven distinct individuals bearing this name (one of them being Orgar, son of Dereman, who appears in this list),<sup>4</sup> and states that many more could doubtless be adduced. That Orgar le Prude was well born and held a prominent place in the gild may be gathered not only from his name appearing third in the list of these burgesses who claimed descent from the ancient and noble band of English cnihts, but from his having been selected by his fellows to go to the King in order to obtain his confirmation of the surrender of their soke to the Priory. He succeeded in his mission, for we read that the King sent his Sheriffs, viz., Aubrey de Vere and Roger, nephew of Hubert (the said Roger being identified by Mr. Round as father of the famous Gervase de Cornhill, Sheriff and Justiciar of London), to invest the church of Holy Trinity, on his behalf, with its new property. The fact that this emissary had a son-in-law named Ailwin has unfortunately led to the confusion of this son-in-law with Ailwin, the son of Leostan (or Leofstan) and grandson of another Orgar. This grandson and Robert his brother appear among the members of the Cnihtengild. A similar difficulty arises in the identification of those bearing the name of Leostan. One of the name, viz., Leostan the goldsmith (different from the Leostan just mentioned), and Wizo (or Witso) his son, were also members of the gild, Leostan himself being descended from a Witso; but there was more than one other Leostan (and notably Leofstan the Portreeve temp. Edward the Confessor), with whom he is liable to be confused.<sup>1</sup> Edward Upcornhill, who appears fourth on the list, has been identified by Mr. Round as father-in-law of the Gervase Fitz Roger, otherwise "de Cornhill," already mentioned, and as son of Edward de Southwark, who figures as one of the witnesses to the surrender of the gild's soke.<sup>2</sup> One name in the list that strikes us for its extraordinary quaintness is that of Osbert Drinchepyn,<sup>3</sup> a name that recalls to mind the custom (said to have been introduced by King Edgar for the purpose of preventing excessive drinking) of putting pins or pegs in tankards at certain distances, beyond which the drinker was not to go. According to "Cocker,"<sup>4</sup> however, "pin-drinking," far from promoting moderation, occasioned much drunkenness, owing to the pegs being few and far between, "so a law was made that priests, monks, and friars should not drink to or at the pins." Perhaps one would not be far wrong in ascribing the origin of the modern expression (much used in India) of a "peg" for a drink to this ancient custom.

Anglo-Saxon symbol for w being very much alike. A similar doubt arises as to the correct reading of the next name on the list, viz., whether "Hornewitesinne" or "Hornepitesinne."

From what little knowledge we possess of these individual members of the Cnihtengild, we can only conclude that they were probably burgesses, and that they constituted an important land-owning fraternity in the City of London. Beyond this we cannot go. Their character differed somewhat from that of the original "cnihts," the founders of the "Cnihtengild," in the lack of the military element. "We may believe," writes Prof. Maitland, "that the burgensis of the tenth century very often was a cniht, a great man's cniht, and that if not a professional soldier (professional militancy was but beginning) he was kept in the borough for a military purpose, and was perhaps fed by the manor to which he belonged. These knights formed guilds for religious and convivial purposes."<sup>1</sup> Seeing that all authorities agree that the "cniht" was a youth of some military training in the service of a patron and supporter, the question suggests itself, In whose retinue were these founders of the "Cnihtengild"? To this the late Mr. Coote would have probably replied that they were in the service and pay of the governing powers of the City, for he writes that "the gild in question was an association of soldiers formed for the special purpose of protecting the City of London against marauders and assailants." Again, "we must.....pronounce that the gild of the knights was an organized body, formed for the ordinary and daily defence of the City in times when the wealth of the citizens must have formed an unfailing attraction to the impressionable outside marauder."<sup>2</sup> In support of this conclusion he adduces (inter alia) the fact that it was to the Priory of Holy Trinity, Aldgate (as representing the ancient Cnihtengild), that the Mayor and the City's Castellain went in solemn procession in times of peril, and there consulted with representatives from the various wards as to measures to be taken for the City's defences.<sup>1</sup> There is, however, no real evidence that these "cnihts," either before or after the formation of their gild, were maintained by the City,<sup>2</sup> any more than there is evidence of their being part and parcel of the City's government, as some writers have supposed.<sup>3</sup> As a gild, the "cnihts," like other gilds, were probably governed by an Alderman; and, as possessors of a soke within the City's liberties, they may have sent an Alderman (as there is little doubt they had a right to do) to join in the City's councils with Aldermen of other sokes or wards, but we have no evidence of their having done so. It is only a surmise based on a subsequent historical fact, namely, that after the conveyance of the land and soke of the gild to the Priory of Holy Trinity, and the extinction of the gild itself, the Prior was (to use Stow's words) "for him and his successors admitted as one of the Aldermen of London, to govern the same land and soke," and the Prior for the time being continued to be ex officio Alderman of the City until the dissolution of the Priory in 1531. Again, the mere fact that some of the members of the gild at the time of the conveyance of its property and jurisdiction to the Priory were Aldermen of the City no more constituted that gild the governing body of the City than the presence of Aldermen upon the Court of Assistants of a Livery Company of to-day gives that company any peculiar authority in municipal affairs.

The charter of confirmation which Orgar le Prude succeeded in obtaining from Henry I. was of the most ample description.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>2</sup> On the contrary, the fact that the thirteen original "Cnihts" were (as we are expressly told) great favourites with the King (whether Cnut or Edgar), and that they succeeded in getting the King to grant them a considerable tract of land, gives rise to the conjecture that they may have been the King's own retainers.

<sup>3</sup> "There can now be no doubt, if any doubt existed before, that the governing body of London was the Knightengild" (Loftie's 'London,' "Historic Towns Series," p. 30). Mr. Loftie appears to have been led to this conclusion by the discovery that among the fifteen members of the Cnihtengild named in the deed of surrender (A. D. 1125) "there was a very large proportion of aldermen" (ibid., p. 31).

It granted the Priory absolute independence of all churches;<sup>1</sup> confirmed the grant made by his queen to the Prior and Canons of the Gate of Aldgate with the soke pertaining thereto, together with certain rents in Exeter; and further confirmed the more recent grant of the soke of the Cnihtengild, together with its lands and liberties within the City and without. The Canons and their "men" were to enjoy their possessions free from all manner of exactions and services, and no tenant was to be called upon to plead in any court except the Court of the Canons, or before the King himself or his Justiciar.

The metes and bounds of the soke of Aldgate and of the Cnihtengild are set out in the Letter-Book, where references are made to two books, marked "A" and "B," in the custody of the Prior of Christchurch.<sup>2</sup> The soke of Aldgate is described as extending from the gate to the outer bar on the east; to the Thames on the south, and "so far into the water as a horseman entering the same could throw a lance"; and as far as a certain house once tenanted by William the priest and others towards Bishopsgate on the north. This soke, becoming united with the soke of the Cnihtengild, came to be known as the soke of the Port or Portsoken, and the right to an aldermanry, enjoyed (presumably) by the members of the gild by reason of their soke, passed with the soke to the Priory of Holy Trinity, and hence the Prior for the time being became (as just mentioned) ex officio Alderman of Portsoken Ward.

No long time elapsed before the Priory had some trouble with its new acquisition. The greater part of the soke lay in East Smithfield, and a portion of it lay so near the Tower precincts that one Warden after another (including Geoffrey de Mandeville, Earl of Essex) was tempted to make encroachments upon it. Matters rose to such a pitch that Norman the Prior took the opportunity of King Stephen being at Westminster in the year 1137 to complain of a recent encroachment. The culprit was summoned to appear, but when asked to show his title to the land in question pleaded possession and nothing more. Thereupon a jury consisting of twenty-one members (among them being Orgar le Prude, who by that time had taken the cowl) proceeded to the spot, accompanied by the Prior and his assessors on the one part, and Andrew Buchuinte ("Bucca Uncta," or Oily-mouth), a notable citizen, whom Mr. Round believes to have been at the time "Justiciar of London," and others on the other part; and, evidence having been taken and the site viewed, the whole land and the soke were adjudged to belong to Holy Trinity.<sup>1</sup> So far the Prior was successful. When, however, it came to dealing with an encroachment by so powerful and overbearing a man as the Earl of Essex, the monks had to abide the Earl's own time for the recovery of ground filched from them for the purpose of a vineyard. It came at last. The deed of restitution to the Church is recorded in the Letter-Book,<sup>2</sup> and, to judge from the appearance of a Templar and two medical men as witnesses, it was probably drawn up and executed when the Earl was lying on his deathbed in 1144.<sup>3</sup> The land thus illegally taken and tardily restored was subsequently confirmed to the Priory by King Stephen,<sup>4</sup> who further enriched it by a grant of lands in the manor of Braughing, co. Herts.<sup>5</sup>

Of miscellaneous matters of minor interest to be found in the Letter-Book may be noticed: (a) the proceedings in connexion with the first recorded election of Aldermen of the City,<sup>6</sup> which took place in June, 1293, when the City was "in the King's hand"; (b) the two occasions (viz., in 1304 and 1307) when the Mayor and Aldermen are represented as sitting as a Court of "Scawagers" or "Scavagers";<sup>7</sup> the several elections of Mayors and Sheriffs between 1303 and 1307, all recorded together<sup>8</sup>—a circumstance which lessens the value of the Letter-Book as a

Saturday after the Feast of St. Margaret [20 July], 19 Edward I. [A.D. 1291], a certain testament of Walter de Londr', "formager," was examined in the presence of Ralph de Sandwych, Warden of the City, and John de Batquille and other Aldermen. The executors being dead, and the terms of the will touching the foundation of a chantry in the church of St. Michael, Cornhill, for the soul of the deceased and the souls of Petronilla and Agnes his wives, John his son, &c., not being capable of execution, it was ordained by the said Warden and Aldermen that Walter Hauteyn, Alderman, should hold the lands, &c., in the parish of St. Michael aforesaid, and should provide the chantry aforesaid, and in case of default the parishioners to take possession, &c.

The above grant was made by the aforesaid Warden, and by John de Batquille, William de Hereford, William de Hereford [sic], William le Mazeliner, William de Farndone, Ralph le Blunt, Thomas Box, John de Canterbury, Martin Box, Monday the morrow of St. Matthew [21 Sept.], 20 Edward I. [A.D. 1292], election was made of Sheriffs of London by Ralph de Sandwych, then Warden of London, Henry le Waleys, John de Batquill, John de Gysors, Ralph le Blund, Thomas de Estanes, Richard Aschewy, Walter de Finchingfeud, Thomas Box, Adam de Fulham, Robert de Rokesle, John de Canterbury, Wolmer de Essex, and William de Betoynne, Aldermen, there present, by whom Henry le Bole and Elyas Russell were elected to the Shrievalty of London and Middlesex, and thereto were sworn. We command you on behalf of the King that the King's peace be well kept between denizens (prives) and strangers; and forasmuch as certain folk of London refuse the current money of the realm, that no denizen nor stranger be so bold or daring, under penalty of forfeiture of all his goods and chattels, as to refuse the current money until it be, by special commandment of the King, forbidden.

This proclamation was made on Sunday the eve of St. Edward [13 Oct.], 26 Edward I. [A.D. 1298], by Henry le Galeys, Mayor, Geoffrey de Norton, John le Blunt, William de Bettoyne, Richard de Gloucestre, William de Leyre, Nicholas Pyckoc, Nicholas de Farndone, Thomas de Sely, Richer de Refham, John de Dunestapil, Aldermen.....

Memorandum of a letter supplicatory sent to the Justices of the Bench on behalf of divers men summoned to attend inquests before them; dispatched on Thursday before the Feast of St. Luke [18 Oct.], 26 Edward I. [A.D. 1298], by Robert de Celishill.

Sunday the eve of the Feast of St. Michael [29 Sept.], before the Aldermen and Commonalty of London, John de Canterbury, Gilbert de la Marche, William de Brockesburne, and Ralph de Storteforde, executors of John de "Steteforde," came and undertook to save the citizens of London against the King as well touching the fermes of the City and Middlesex as other debts affecting the bailiwick of the Sheriffs, &c.

Edward, &c., to Rauf de Sanwys, Warden of his Tower of London, &c. Whereas the Mayor and Barons of London are bound to present each year the Sheriffs of London before our Exchequer at Westminster the day after Michaelmas and likewise their Mayor on the morrow of SS. Simon and Jude, who after being received by the Treasurer and Barons of the said Exchequer ought to make oath to us as belongs to his office, and forasmuch as the Exchequer is not at present at Westminster, but elsewhere, for certain reasons as you are aware; we being desirous that the franchise of the citizens should be observed, and for the good service they have done us in the past, do of our special favour command you to act on behalf of our Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, &c. Given under our Privy Seal at "Carleal," 13 Sept., 26 Edward I. [A.D. 1298].<sup>1</sup>

By virtue of the above writ, Thomas Sely and Richer de Reffham, mercer, were elected to the Shrievalty, and were admitted at Westminster the morrow of the Feast of St. Michael before the aforesaid Sir Ralph.

And afterwards on the morrow of the Feast of SS. Simon and Jude, the same year, Henry le Galeys was admitted to the Mayoralty at Westminster before the aforesaid Ralph.

The commandment of our lord the King, whom God protect, and the Mayor of the City of London that no man, native or stranger, be so daring as to make any manner of change of money nor of aught else appertaining to the King's change, except at the King's Exchange at the Tower of London, on pain of forfeiture of his lands, tenements, and all his goods, and his body to the King's will.<sup>2</sup>

Letter from Henry le Galeys, Mayor of London, under the Mayoralty seal, to the Mayor, Echevins, &c., of Amyens, Nele, and Corbye. Whereas the burgesses of those towns hesitated to bring their merchandise to London on account of the ferm due from them being in arrear,<sup>3</sup> as formerly they had been accustomed, they are invited to come and traffic freely as of old, saving only to the City a half year's ferm, viz., between Easter and Michaelmas last. Dated the morrow of St. Katharine [25 Nov.], 27 Edward I. [A.D. 1298].

Wednesday after the Feast of St. Nicholas [6 Dec.], 27 Edward I. [A.D. 1298], before Henry le Galys, Mayor; John le Blunt,

And if the said John and Symon, &c. And the said John and Symon come and defend the words, &c., and say that they hold, in part, lands and tenements, the property of the said Luke, but say that the tenements were given in free marriage to the said Luke and to Roysia, daughter of John de Gisors, by the said John, and that, however the said Luke may have become the King's debtor, he had no power of alienation, &c., over the said tenements, inasmuch as they were entailed, and that such is the case they demand an inquiry. The prosecutor denies the inability of the aforesaid Luke to alienate, and also demands an inquiry. A jury accordingly summoned for the following Wednesday. The jurors, viz., Alan de Suffolk, Alan Mulgas, Robert Hod, Richard Hardel, Laurence de Totenham, William Bernard, Adam (?) Apselon, Stephen Bernard, Symon Godard, Roger atte Vyne, and Walter le Coner (?), say on oath that the said Luke owned (inpetravit) a tenement, formerly the property of Robert de Basingcourt, in the parish of St. Martin Bermancherche,<sup>1</sup> together with an adjoining house called "Parys," and also a tenement in a little lane called "Le Arche" upon Walebrok, in the parish of Paternostercherche,<sup>2</sup> in common [with the said Roysia], so that the survivor of them has power of alienation. Accordingly it is ordered that the aforesaid tenements be taken into the hand of the City until, &c.

Be it remembered that on Friday next after the Feast of St. Michael [29 Sept.], 27 Edward I. [A.D. 1299], Richer de Refham, the Sheriff of London the previous year, came to the Guildhall before Henry le Waleys, the Mayor, John le Blunt, Elyas Russel, John de Canterbury, William de Betoyne, Geoffrey de Nortone, Richard de Gloucestre, Adam de Fulham, and other Aldermen, and John de Donstaple and Simon de Paris, then Chamberlains of the Guildhall, and delivered up three letters patent of the lord the King which the said Richer had in his custody, viz.: (1) the confirmation of the Carta Foreste, dated Westminster, 2 April, the year aforesaid; (2) the ordinance touching money made in the Parliament at Stebenhutte, 15 May [sic], the same year; and (3) a letter touching the postponement of the perambulation of the forest to Michaelmas,<sup>1</sup> dated at Lewes, 25 June, the year aforesaid, &c.

Be it remembered that on Monday before the Feast of St. Edward, K. [13 Oct.], 27 Edward I. [A.D. 1299], in the presence of Henry le Galeys, Mayor, John le Blund, Walter de Fynchingfeld, John de Canterbury, Richer de Refham, Thomas Sely, Thomas Romayn, Nicholas Pikot, William de Betoyne, William de Leyre, Ralph de Honilane, and John de Donstaple, Aldermen, Richer de Refham, late Sheriff, delivered to William Sygeyn, lord of "Ryouns," a certain letter obligatory whereby the said William was bound to Katherine de la Rirole in £70 14s., and another whereby he was bound to "Stold" the Lombard in £47 15s., &c.

Saturday after the Feast of St. Katherine, V. [25 Nov.], 28 Edward I. [A.D. 1299], came Thomas de Basinges before Elias Russel, the Mayor, Geoffrey de Nortone, William de Leyre, John le Blunt, William de Betoyme, Ralph de Honilane, Walter de Finchingfeld, Nicholas Pycot, John de Donestaple, and Simon de Parys, Aldermen, and agreed to render account to Stephen, son of Richard de Abbindone, of the issues of lands, tenements, and rents accruing during his guardianship of the said Stephen; a day given and auditors appointed, viz., William de Leyre and Walter de Finchingfeud.

Wednesday the Feast of St. Hillary [13 Jan.] came Henry le Chener, mercer, before Elias Russel, the Mayor, Geoffrey de Northone, John le Blund, William de Betoyme, John de Donestaple, and Simon de Paris, Aldermen, and other Aldermen [not named], and offered to pay to John de Cauntebrugge, mercer, the sum of £20 in "pollards," being a debt due for merchandise bought at the Feast of St. John the Baptist [24 June], 27 Edward I. [A.D. 1299], as appears by a certain writing; but the said John refused to accept the money, which is therefore ordered to be delivered to the Chamberlain until, &c.

Thursday after the Feast of the Purification B. M. [2 Feb.], 28 Edward I. [A.D. 1299-1300], came Sir William and Sir Symon de Cray, Knights of Sir John de Revers (milites domini Johannis de Revers), and offered to pay on behalf of the said Sir John to William Trente, John de Cheggewelle, and Gerard de Horgol the sum of £110 in "pollards," which were shown in court, instead of "sterlings," as by the new Statute bound to satisfy a debt.

The following Saturday Sir Michael de Polinges offered to pay James de Pystoyle.....

Writ to the Mayor and Sheriffs to see justice done to Roger la Ware, whose goods and chattels to the value of £100 had been seized by William Tupyng of Toulouse, and afterwards detained in their custody, as the said Roger complained. Dated York, 16 Nov., 27 Edward I. [A.D. 1299].

Return to the above. Inquiry had been made on the oath of good men of the City, and it had been found that the above William Tupyn had secretly taken and carried away goods and chattels belonging to the above Roger la Ware which were in the custody of a certain John de Norhamtone, clerk, of the value of £74 19s. 8d., viz., £56 13s. in "pollards," £4 sterling, ten silver dishes worth 12 marks, six silver salts worth 40s., two silver plated cups and one silver cup with covercle worth 60s., and two fermails of gold worth 2 marks, which goods, together with others, were seized upon the said William by the Warden of the river Thames and Richer de Reefham and Thomas Sely, the late Sheriffs of London, because he wished to carry them beyond the sea, contrary to the King's recent ordinance against the exportation of sterling or other silver, and they were by order of Sir John de Droknesford delivered to Sir John Sendal, the Warden of the Exchange at the Tower, by indenture. The Mayor and Sheriffs were therefore unable to deliver the goods again to the said Roger.

Letters patent under the seal of the Commonalty acknowledging the receipt of the sum of £4 14s. of the ferm of the City from Henry de Fingrie, one of the Sheriffs of London, pursuant to the King's late grant made to the City for satisfying the debts of certain Gascons. Dated Tuesday after the Feast of Conception B. M. [8 Dec.], 28 Edward I. [A.D. 1299].

The same day a certain letter for £8 10s. was sealed to Richer de Reefham for the debts of the Gascons, and another letter for £37 10s. to Thomas Sely for similar debts.

Charter of King John abolishing the Guild of Weavers of London.<sup>3</sup>

John, by the grace of God, &c., to his Archbishops, Bishops, &c., greeting. Know ye that, on the petition of the Mayor and our citizens of London, we have granted, and by the present charter have confirmed, that the Guild of Weavers shall not henceforth be in the City of London, nor be ever restored. Inasmuch as, however, we have been accustomed yearly to receive 18 marks of silver from that Guild of Weavers, our aforesaid citizens shall pay each year to us and our heirs 20 marks of silver in tale, at the Feast of St. Michael, at our Exchequer. Witnesses, H[ubert], Archbishop of Canterbury, our Chancellor, E[ustace] of Ely and W[illiam] of Avranches, Bishops, Hugh de Gournay, Robert de Harecort', Thomas Basset, Peter de Stok', Richard de Reiners. Given by the hands of the same H[ubert], Archbishop of Canterbury, at Gournay, the 20th day of March, in the third year of our reign [A.D. 1201-2].

Of Robert de Rokesle and Martin de Ambresbury, for arrears of the ferm of the City of London, £213 3s. 1d.; out of which there is allowed to the said Martin 100 marks which he paid to William de Bettoyne, then Chamberlain, and £25 7s. 9d. which he paid for casks purchased pursuant to the King's writ, and £6 5s. 9d. paid for alms, and £8 6s. 8d. which the Sheriffs of Essex and Surrey levied by writ of the King out of the Exchequer. The sum total allowed the said Martin by the items aforesaid being £106 13s. 6½d. So there remains upon the same £106 9s. 6½d., whereof Robert answers for £13 3s. 1d., and the said Martin answers for £93 6s. 5½d., and so the sum will be complete. Item, the said Robert and Martin owe for divers extracts and sums £231 15s. 4½d., viz., for the Iter of John de Berewik £181 17s. 6½d., and for small purprestures £7 10s. 4d., and for the rent of the late Adam de Stratton £33 12s. 2d., and for divers debts £8 0s. 10d., and for two debts 34s. as appears supra; of which the said Martin will himself be responsible for the rent of the late Adam de Stratton £33 12s. 2d., and for ameracements of Berkingecherche £13 6s. 8d. under divers heads; and the said Robert will himself be responsible for £67 6s. 2½d., which he levied by divers sums as for the Iter, issues and other extracts. And so they owe in common £117 10s. 5½d., still to be levied in London and the county of Middlesex. Sum total of the burden demanded of them £444 18s. 5½d., of which Martin is himself responsible as of the ferm of the rents of Adam de Stratton and the ameracements of Berking' for £246 18s. 10d., whereof allowances are made to them as appears supra £106 13s. 6½d. And so they owe clear £140 5s. 3½d. The sum for which Robert himself answers, as appears supra, of the ferm, the Iter, and other extracts, £80 qs. 3½*d.*, whereon there is allowed him by a tally of the Exchequer £19 7s. 5*d.*; and so he owes clear £69 15*s.* 9*d.* The sum which they answer for in common for debts still to be levied £117 10*s.* 4*d.* Moreover the said Robert is bound to the said Martin on a certain account of the last term of the year they were Sheriffs in £29 2*s.* 11½*d.* Whereof the said Robert demands allowance of certain costs and expenses by him incurred for their advantage, as he reasonably can show, &c.; and the said Martin likewise demands allowance of his expenses as justice shall dictate, &c.

Return made to writs of William Inge, Justice for gaol delivery at Gloucester, addressed to John de Armenters and Henry de Fingrie, Sheriffs of London, anno 28 Edward I.<sup>1</sup> The Mayor answers for himself that he has not the custody of any prison in London nor ought to answer for prisoners. The Sheriffs answer that Mannekyn le Haumer and Laurence le Poleter are freemen of the City, and by reason thereof they (the Sheriffs) had released them on mainprise for their appearance at the first assize at the Tower, or before the Justices for gaol delivery of Newgate, to answer the charges brought against them, and therefore they (the Sheriffs) could not act as requested without an offence against the franchise of the City. [The Sheriffs further answer that] Robert Clarel, William de la Chandelerie, Geoffrey le Ussher, William de Chalfhunte, Edmund le Creyour, Elias de la Garderobe, and Hugh the Parson of "Quat" were delivered to them by the King's Marshal, and they could not send them out of the City without the King's writ for costs and charges arising from such an act. Tuesday the morrow of the Assumption B. M. [15 Aug.], 28 Edward I. [A.D. 1300], before William de Leyre [and]

(Afterwards, viz., on Friday before the Feast of ‘St. George [23 April], anno 29 Edward I. [A.D. 1301], came Richard Baudechun and Thomas le “Northreve” and satisfied the Commonalty of their trespass, and were admitted to the freedom of the City and sworn, &c., as appears in the paper of redemption of freedom.)

Reply made by Elias Russel, the Mayor, and citizens of London to the letter of Peter de “Fremville,” Knt., and Robert de Champagne, Wardens of the Fair of Champagne and Brie, declining to arrest the goods and bodies of the debtors mentioned therein, inasmuch as they were not freemen of the City, except by special order of the King, who was then engaged in war with Scotland. Dated Saturday after the Feast of Assumption B. M. [15 Aug.], A.D. 1300.

Be it remembered that on Friday the morrow of St. Michael, 28 Edward I. [A.D. 1300], Richard de Caumpes and Luke de Havering were presented for the Shrievalty of London and Middlesex by Elyas Russel, the Mayor, and the whole Commonalty of the said City, before Sir Ralph de Sandewych, the Constable of the Tower, and were admitted according to the terms of the charter of the City.

The following Monday it was agreed and granted by Elyas Russel, the Mayor, and the Aldermen there present, and by good and lawful men of the craft of peltry and of the curriers, that thenceforth workmen of the craft of curriers should not for the future take, viz., for every thousand of grisevere,<sup>1</sup> more than 5*s.*; also for stranglin<sup>2</sup> and polan<sup>3</sup> and every kind of black work (et cujuslibet alterius nigri operis), more than 5*s.* 6*d.*; and for Roskyn,<sup>4</sup> more than 3*s.* 6*d.*; and for a hundred of conies of England, more than 12*d.*; and for a hundred of conies of Spain, more than 8*d.*; and for a hundred of Scrimpyns,<sup>5</sup> more than 7*d.*

And the aforesaid curriers agree that if it shall happen in future, which God forbid, that any of the said craft of curriers contravene this ordinance in any particular and thereof be convicted, they shall make amends according to the amount of their trespass as shall be adjudged by three men of the craft of peltry and one man of the craft of curriers elected and sworn for the purpose. And for the observance of this ordinance there were elected by men of each craft, viz., Philip de Northone, Simon de Bruchtone, John de Cornewaille, skimmers, and Martin le Coureour.

breadth of skids (groporum) for the wheels of carts, which rods [were] marked with the mark of the Chamber of the Guildhall, London; whereof one remains in the aforesaid Chamber, and another rod was delivered to John Dode and Robert de Padingtone, ironmongers of Chepe, on Monday next before the Feast of the Purification of the Blessed Mary [2 Feb.], 29 Edward I. [A.D. 1300-1]; and the third rod was delivered on the Monday aforesaid to John de Wymondham, ironmonger of Bridge. The said John, Robert, and John swore upon the Holy Gospels that from day to day they would warn all merchants bringing such iron rims (ferramenta) to the City of London, as well from the Wealds as elsewhere, to bring thenceforth no such iron rims unless they be of the length and breadth aforesaid, upon pain of forfeiting the said rims; and that such rims as should be found contrary to the assize aforesaid after the Feast of Easter next would be altogether forfeited, &c.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> As to the etymology of "aunser" or "aunsel," see 'Cal. Letter-Book A,' p. 154 n. It has been suggested (Athenæum, 1 Sept., 1900, p. 279) that "aunser" or "auncer" may be equivalent for "anchor," but this passage proves the surmise to be wrong.

They say on their oath that Adam de Warfeld, sacristan of Westminster, Alexander de Persore and Thomas de Dene, monks of the said church, were ordainers and contrivers of the burglary (burgerie) of the Treasury of the lord the King. And John Albon, "mazoun," and a certain John, servant of the aforesaid John, and Richard de "Podelescote" broke into the Treasury aforesaid and entered it, and carried away the treasure and jewels found therein.<sup>1</sup> They say also that Roger de

<sup>1</sup> This robbery took place on the 2nd of May, 1303. Richard de "Podelescote," "Podelicote," or "Podyngtone" (as the name appears elsewhere) sought sanctuary in the church of St. Michael, Candlewick Street, whence he was taken by force on Midsummer Eve, by bailiffs of the City, and placed in the custody of Hugh Pourte, one of the Sheriffs. For this breach of sanctuary the bailiffs (whose names are given as Gocelin and Thomas Attewelle) were made to do penance, walking bare-foot in shirts and breeches, with a wax candle in hand, from Bow Church

Perstoke, the drawer of beer (tractator cervisie) in the cellar for the use of the convent, Robert de Cherringe, John de Nottele, John de Prescote, Thomas de Lichefeld, Walter, valet of Sir Arnold de Campan', William, valet of John Shenche, Keeper of the King's Palace, Roger and Adam, valets of the aforesaid sacristan of Westminster, were aiders and abettors of the said robbery. They say, moreover, that the aforesaid Richard de "Podelicote" was found seized of part of the jewels aforesaid, comprising coronets, fermails of gold, girdles, cups, and scuttles (scutellis) of silver to the value of £2,200. And that the aforesaid sacristan was seized of a bowl and cup of silver the value of which they knew not. They say also that John de Neumarche, a goldsmith residing at Billingesgate, was found seized of gold weighing 6s. and three precious stones, and they hold him suspect. And they say that Walter de Walepol bought in good faith and unsuspectingly of the aforesaid Richard de Podelicote three gold rings, and William Torel in like manner two gold rings. And Geoffrey de Bradele, girdler, in like manner bought of the said Richard a plate of silver weighing £14 15s. And that John de Brigeford, goldsmith, likewise bought a fermail of gold and Oriental "perles" of the value of 70s. And that Thomas de Frowyk, goldsmith, in like manner bought of Imayna la Berestere precious stones of the value of 42s., and likewise Nicholas de St. Botulph, goldsmith, stones of the value of 20s., which stones the said Imayna had received from John de Neumarche. They say also that about the Feast of the Invention of H. Cross [3 May] last past John de Uggele, William de Kinebautone and John his brother, and Chastanea la Barbere and Alice her sister met in a certain house within the

to Newgate and from Newgate back to St. Michael's, having, moreover, to walk to Canterbury the next day without girdle and hood. Early in 1304 Commissioners sat at the Tower to investigate the robbery. Ten monks and a clerk are recorded as having been charged with being accomplices, and notwithstanding their objection to being made amenable to secular judges, the monks were committed until further orders. The sacristan was convicted of receiving and concealing the King's jewels.—'Chron. Edward I. and II.,' i. 130, 132.

And because about the same time the Treasury was broken into, they hold these suspect of the robbery and felony aforesaid.

This verdict was given on Saturday after the Feast of SS. Peter and Paul [29 June], 31 Edward I. [A.D. 1303], by oath of William de Leyre, William de Betoyme, Thomas Romeyn, John de Wangrave, John de Armenters, John de Canterbury, Adam de Fulham, Hugh Pourte and Simon de Paris, the Sheriffs, Richer de Reffham, John de Vintry, Coroner, William le Mazerer, John de Dunstaple, Nicholas Picot, Salamon le Cotiller, Nicholas de Farndone, Henry de Gloucestre, Aldermen, &c.

Edward, by the grace of God, &c., to the Mayor and Sheriffs of London. Whereas, among certain articles which we by our charter for us and our heirs have granted to merchant strangers and foreigners<sup>2</sup> coming with their goods and merchandise within our realm and power, we have ordained that in every merchant vill and fair within our said realm and power our weights should be kept in a fixed place, and that, before weighing, the balance (statera) should, in the presence of the buyer and seller, be seen to be empty and the arms of the said balance be equal, and that thenceforth the weigher should weigh equally, and that when he had placed the balance evenly he should remove his hands so that it remained even; we command you, as we have already commanded you, that you cause our aforesaid ordinance in all things to be straitly observed with the same merchants according to the terms of our charter aforesaid; or, otherwise, that you signify to us the reason why this our command already laid upon you you have failed to obey. Witness ourself at Westminster, the 14th day of October, the thirty-third year of our reign [A.D. 1305].

Return. The manner of weighing heavy goods (averia ponderis<sup>1</sup>) coming to the City of London from time immemorial was, and still is, that the balance should always draw towards the better, that is to say, towards the thing bought,<sup>2</sup> and in that way the said goods are sold to archbishops, bishops, earls, barons, and others soever buying goods of that kind in the said City; and this custom and manner of weighing our ancestors have used, and we hitherto have used, and our lord the King has confirmed to us by his charter our liberties and free customs which we have hitherto used by grant of his predecessors, kings of England. Wherefore we cannot nor ought to change the customs of his City used and approved by reason of the grant now made to merchant strangers to the injury and prejudice of his citizens, and also of the magnates and Commonalty of his realm, especially since in the charter granted to them it is contained that weighing should be done in the manner in the said charter contained when it is not against the lord of the place, or contrary to the liberty granted by the lord the King himself or his ancestors, or contrary to the custom of the vills and fairs hitherto observed.<sup>3</sup>

weigher to allow the buyer a "draft" or margin of four pounds in every hundredweight. At the present day a custom prevails in the English tea trade for the tea importer to give a precisely similar "draft" to the dealer, viz., one pound on every chest of tea of twenty-eight pounds.

Another writ insisting upon the Mayor and Sheriffs executing the King's former command, otherwise they are to appear before him at Westminster on Monday after the Feast of Edmund, K. [20 Nov.], next to answer for their contempt. Dated at Stanes, 16 Nov., 33 Edward I. [A.D. 1305].

Return to the effect that they would appear on the day named.

Edward, &c., to the Mayor and Sheriffs of London. Whereas Walter de Wyk and Matilda his wife had impleaded in the Husting John de Laufare, declaring that he had no right of entry into a certain messuage until the expiration of a grant of the same made by John de Pontefract, a former husband of the said Matilda, to Abraham Motun, a Jew; and whereas the said John de Laufare claims the messuage by virtue of a grant made by us after the messuage had become escheated to us on the exile of the said Jew;<sup>1</sup> and whereas search has been made for the aforesaid conveyance of the messuage to the Jew among the Rolls of our Justices lately assigned for ward of the Jews and cannot be found, we command you to cause the Rolls of the Husting to be searched for enrolments of any documents whereby the said Matilda can be barred of action. Witness ourself at Westminster, the 7th day of March, the thirty-first year of our reign [A.D. 1302-3].

We have caused the Rolls of recognizances, deeds, and writings enrolled in the Husting of London temp. Henry the late King, and likewise of the present King to be searched, and it does not appear that the aforesaid Matilda made any recognizance of the tenement mentioned in the above writ, which writ, thus endorsed, was returned under the common seal on Thursday the eve of All Saints [1 Nov.], 31 Edward I. [A.D. 1303].

<sup>1</sup> Towards the close of the year 1290 all Jews were expelled from England by the King's order, and among them were some 2,000 London Jews. Abraham Motun must have been a Jew of some distinction, for we find a grant made to him in 1282 of property situate in the parish of St. Michael, Wood Street, in trust for the Jewish community in England. Hust. Roll 13 (37). There was quite a large family of Motuns in the City, one of whom named Hugh combined the business of an oil and colour man with the more distinguished duties of City Chamberlain. —See 'Cal. Letter-Book A,' pp. 83-4.

A settlement of differences between Roger de Paris and the Commonalty of the Mercery of London, plaintiffs, and John le Mirourer, defendant, made on Wednesday after the Feast of St. James, Ap. [25 July], 32 Edward I. [A.D. 1304], in the presence of Henry de Suttone, Warden of the Friars Minors of London, John de Wangrave, William de Leyre, Simon de Paris, Richer de Refham, mercer, and Nicholas Pycot, Chamberlain, and many others [not named], viz., that the defendant pledged to the aforesaid mercers the sum of £20; whereof £10 are remitted altogether; 100s. are respited, and only to be paid in the event of another delinquency; and 100s. the defendant undertakes to pay to the work of the Chapel of the Blessed Mary of the Pui (de Podo<sup>1</sup>) on the Feast of St. Bartholomew next, unless he find some further favour. He, moreover, swore on the Holy Gospels not to draw off any merchant from the aforesaid trade, nor avow the goods of any foreigner, nor do any injury to any one of the trade, &c. And Walter, his brother and apprentice, came and took a similar oath.

Afterwards, viz., on Thursday after the Feast of St. Giles [1 Sept.], the year aforesaid, the said John le Mirourer paid to Andrew de Staunforth, skinner, Peter de Sparham, William Hasard, and John de Etone, mercers, 100s. of the aforesaid recognizance, and they bound themselves severally and jointly to acquit him against the Commonalty of the Mercery of London.

<sup>1</sup> The "Pui" was the name of a fraternity recently imported into the City of London from Le Puy, the ancient capital of Velay, in Auvergne. Unlike other fraternities, it possessed the unique characteristic of being devoted to the cultivation of poetry ('Liber Cust., i. 216-28). The chapel here alluded to stood in the church or precinct of St. Martin le Grand. There was also a chapel of St. Mary "de la Pewe" at Westminster, but this appears to be of later date, and its name may be derived from a different source (Smith, 'Hist. of Westm.,' pp. 123-7).

and Peter ('Calendar of Wills,' i. 176). John, son of Anselm "Quintin," formerly called "Knot," occurs in a deed of 1309. Hust. Roll, 37 (55).

Mayor, John de Wengrave, William de Leyre, Richer de Refham, Adam de Fulham, Richard de Gloucestre, Nicholas de Farndone, Nicholas Pycot, Simon de Paris, John de Dunstaple, Salamon le Cotiller, Richard de Chigwelle, Henry de Gloucestre, and Richard de Wilehale, Aldermen; and it was found, upon their own acknowledgment, that they held land by villainage of the Bishop of London in Stebenhethē,<sup>1</sup> and resided without the liberties of the City of London. It was therefore adjudged that they lose the freedom of the City, &c.

Thursday after the Feast of Conversion of St. Paul [25 Jan.], 34 Edward I. [A.D. 1305-6], precept issued by Sirs John le Blound, the Mayor, John de Wengrave, Thomas Romeyn, Walter de Finchingfeld, Richer de Refham, Adam de Fulham, Richard de Gloucestre, Richard de Wylehale, and Thomas Sely, Aldermen, to the fishmongers of Bridge Street and the old fish market, then being present, that they allow, under heavy penalty, freemen of the City who are fishmongers to stand at stalls and to trade with them, and to freely obtain their share of merchandise bought, as is befitting and just, and as the freedom of the City demands, &c.<sup>2</sup>

Writ of Privy Seal addressed to the Aldermen and other good folk of the City of London enjoining them to elect four of the best men of the City to attend to the duties of the Mayoralty, &c., in the absence of John le Blound, the Mayor, who was to be created a Knight at the Feast of Pentecost in company with Edward the King's son.<sup>3</sup> Dated at Wolveseye,<sup>4</sup> 4 May, 34 Edward I. [A.D. 1306].

The Fishmongers, nevertheless, continued to form a very close guild, and constantly endeavoured to exclude freemen from their trade.

<sup>3</sup> Not only were Prince Edward and Johan le Blount, the Mayor, knighted on Whitsunday, but nearly three hundred others. The total number of Knights in the City of London at this period, we are told, was estimated by the heralds at a thousand. 'Chron. Edward I. and II.,' i. 146.

John de Paris, "corder," came into the Chamber of the Guildhall on Monday after the Feast of St. Hillary [13 Jan.], 35 Edward I. [A.D. 1306-7], and paid to Robert de Hauvile, the husband of Margery, relict of Robert de Rokesle, late Sheriff of London, the sum of 16s. 8d. received of the rents of the said Robert as attorney of the Commonalty for the debts which the said Robert and Martin de Ambresbiri his fellow-sheriff owed the King for the time of their Shrievalty,<sup>2</sup> as well of the ferm as of other debts, &c.; and this was done by precept of Sir John le Blund, the Mayor, and the Aldermen assembled as a Court of Scavagers,<sup>3</sup> and of many citizens then present, &c.

<sup>1</sup> Pour la verte cire. Estreats delivered to the Sheriff out of the Exchequer for the purpose of being levied bore the seal of that Court in green wax. Prior to the year 1859 (when the Act for Regulating the Office of Queen's Remembrancer was passed) an Estreat Roll under the Great Seal of the Exchequer, containing a schedule of fines, forfeited recognizances, &c., to which the City of London was entitled, was annually delivered by an officer of the Court of Exchequer to the City Chamberlain, who in turn delivered it to the City Solicitor as the acting City's Bailiff. A large number of these Rolls are still preserved, dating back to the seventeenth century. Since 1859 there has been no such formal record of what belongs to the City, and it has rested each year with the bailiffs to claim on behalf of the Corporation before the auditors of the Sheriffs' accounts such fines and forfeitures as they believe the City to be entitled to.

who took the toll or custom charged upon the "scavage" or "scawage" (i.e., showage from A.-S. scēawian, to show) or opening out of imported goods. At a later period he appears to have executed such miscellaneous duties as seeing that chimneys, ovens, &c., were properly protected against fire, that pavements were kept in repair, and the streets kept clear of refuse. (See the oath of the "scawageours," temp. xv. cent., Letter-Book D, fos. 3 b and lxxxv.) This officer, the late Mr. Riley remarks ('Liber Albus,' Introd., p. xli), no doubt gave name to the "scavenger" of the present day, although, in the opinion of Prof. Skeat, "the etymology of scavenger from the A.-S. scēawian is impossible, because the A.-S. sc becomes sh in English." (Athenæum, Nov. 25, 1899). All this, however, scarcely helps us to the meaning of a "Court of Scavagers," any more than does the latest discovery made by Mr. J. H. Round from a MS. in the British Museum (Add. MS. 14,252, fo. 106), viz., that escauingers were at one time elected for the purpose of regulating the watch and ward of the Precept to the Mayor of the City of London that he produce before the Steward and Marshal of the King's household, on Monday before the Feast of Annunciation B. M. [25 March], wheresoever, &c., the Sheriffs of London to answer to the lord the King for having attached certain men of Sir John de Banstede, clerk, for trespasses committed within the verge (infra virgam), and unjustly detained them in prison; and that they (the Sheriffs) cause their bodies in the meanwhile to be delivered to the Marshal of the lord the King for safe custody.

Return: The bodies of Alexander Tancard and Richard Tancard, attached by Nigel Drury, Sheriff of London, at the suit of Simon, the valet of Geoffrey de Cavendihs, for trespass contrary to the King's peace committed against him in the City aforesaid, have been delivered by mainprise to answer the aforesaid Simon for the trespass committed against him before the Sheriffs of London at the next court, according to the custom of the City. But the bodies of the said Alexander and Richard we cannot deliver to the custody of the King's Marshal, for that would be contrary to the liberty of the City aforesaid. Moreover, the said Simon was so wounded by the said Alexander and Richard that his life is despaired of.

Simon de Corp came before the Mayor and Aldermen on Saturday the Feast of SS. Peter and Paul [29 June], 1 Edward II. [A.D. 1308], and undertook that the goods of John de Guldeford to the value of £40 should remain in the houses of John de Guldeford ready for the City to distrain upon until he shall have satisfied the Commonalty of arrears of tallages due from him.

The King to the Sheriff of Middlesex greeting. Master William de Ewelle, Canon of the church of St. Paul, London, has complained to us that Symon de Paris, John de Dunstaple, Thomas Jovenel, and Richer de Refham unlawfully and without judgment disseised him of his free tenement in the parish of St. Giles without Crepelgate, London, after the first crossing the sea of the lord Henry the King our grandfather into Gascony. We therefore command you, if the aforesaid William guarantee you touching his present claim, to cause the said tenement to be resealed of the chattels taken therein, and to allow the tenement itself to be in peace until Monday in the quinzaine of St. John the Baptist next coming. In the meanwhile you shall cause twelve free and lawful men of the venue to view the tenement and the names of those in the writ, and shall summon them by good summons that they be prepared to make recognizance thereof before our Justices at Westminster; and you shall cause, by pledges and safe sureties, the said Symon, John, Thomas, and Richer, or their bailiffs if they themselves cannot be found, to be there present to hear the recognizance; and you shall have there the summons and names of the sureties and this writ. Witness ourself at Westminster, the 20th day of May, the first year of our reign [A.D. 1308].

Return: The free tenement which Master William de Ewelle put in his view (in visu suo) is not in my bailiwick, but is within the precinct of the liberty of the City of London, wherefore I cannot proceed to the execution of this writ.<sup>1</sup>

Murage of London let to ferm, anno 1 Edward II.

The murage of the City of London arising out of foreign bread, poultry, cheese, timber, and in the vill of Stratford atte Bowe, was granted and delivered by Sir John le Blound, the Mayor, Aldermen, Sheriffs, and Chamberlain of the City aforesaid to Roger Priour and Roger le Lunge, poulterers and citizens of London, from Saturday next after the Feast of St. John ante portam Latinam [6 May], anno 1 Edward II.

<sup>1</sup> The above writ was presumably addressed to, and the return made by, the Sheriffs of London acting as Sheriff of Middlesex, according to custom. Only one instance has hitherto come to light in the City's records of an individual being mentioned by name as Sheriff of Middlesex (prior to the Local Government Act of 1888) who was not also one of the Sheriffs of London. This was the case of "Gerin" in 1283, recorded in 'Cal. Letter-Book A,' p. 76.

[A.D. 1308], until the end of one year next ensuing, for £14 13s. 4d. sterling, paying therefor to the aforesaid Mayor, Aldermen, Sheriffs, and Chamberlain, or their attorney each month of four weeks in that year 22s. 6d., and the last month of the said year 23s. 4d., by mainprise of John de Brompyerd, mercer, and Ralph Ratespray, merchant of animals (mercator animalium), who came and bound themselves, their heirs, and executors jointly and severally for payment of the money aforesaid in manner above signified, &c.

The murage of the City arising out of Candelwykestrete from the house of Fulk de St. Edmund as far as the postern, and out of the postern near the Tower, and from the hall of the Danes<sup>1</sup> as far as "la Yeynlade,"<sup>2</sup> was similarly let to John de la Barre for one year from Saturday next after the Feast of St. Dunstan, Bp. [19 May], anno 1 Edward II. [A.D. 1308], at £10 sterling, paying each month of four weeks 15s. 4 $\frac{3}{4}$ d. by mainprise of Nigel Drueri, then Sheriff, and Thomas de Kent, serjeant.

Johanni le Little Smethefeld.

The murage of the City arising out of Smethefeld was similarly let to John de Littele for one year from Thursday the Feast of St. Ambrose, Bp. [4 April], 1 Edward II. [A.D. 1308], except for cheese and old cloth at Fair times, for £8 sterling; to be paid by quarterly instalments of 40s. by mainprise of Nicholas Dereman, butcher.

The murage of the City arising out of St. Laurencelane, Sopereslane, and Ismongereslane, and the Tanners' seld,<sup>3</sup> and the gates of Alegate, Bisshopesgate, Crepelgate, and Aldresgate was similarly let to Gocelyn le Serjaunt of London for one year from Saturday, 1 June, anno 1 Edward II. [A.D. 1308], for £36 13s. 4d.; to be paid, viz., each month of four weeks 56s. 5d., by mainprise of John Laurence and Peter le Taverner de Graschirche.

Young, the editor of the 'Annals of the Barber-Surgeons,' prints the passage correctly (p. 24), and points out that the unsavoury duty here imposed upon Richard le Barbour was due to the fact that the Barbers in early days superintended the Baths or Bagnios, a favourite resort of improper characters.

Wednesday after the Feast of SS. Peter and Paul [29 June], 2 Edward II. [A.D. 1309], came Adam Wade and Ralph de Beverlay, clerk, before the Chamberlain, and became sureties for Ralph Gubbe, one of the executors of Walter Gubbe, to answer for the property belonging to Richard, one of the orphan children of the said Walter, comprising goods, &c., of the value of £18 15s., and rents of the annual value of £7 11s. 4d., and a rent of 1 mark at Bandone, quo et quando, etc.

Fo. cxvii.

Afterwards, viz., on Monday before the Purification [2 Feb.], 10 Edward II. [A.D. 1316-17], came Richard, son of Walter Gubbe, before Sir John de Wengrave, the Mayor, and complained of his being unable to recover his property from Ralph Gubbe, his guardian, and prayed that the said Ralph, and the executors of Adam Wade, one of the sureties of the said Ralph, and Ralph de Beverley, clerk, another surety, might be summoned to render an account. They are accordingly summoned, and Ralph Gubbe renders an account. He acknowledges the receipt of £88 and 20d., of which he had spent £45 and 20d. on repairs of houses, maintenance of the said Richard, and defending an action of dower brought by Margery, the widow of John Gubbe. The residue, viz., £43, he is unable to account for or pay. He is therefore committed to prison until, &c.

Fo. cxvii b.

At the suit of the above Richard, an inquisition is ordered of the property held by the above Ralph Gubbe, Ralph de Beverley, and Adam Wade, at the time they came to the Guildhall and became sureties of the said Ralph. The inquest is taken before John de Wengrave, the Mayor, and John Dode, the Chamberlain of the City, on Friday before the Feast of St. Gregory [12 March], 10 Edward II. [A.D. 1316-17]. The jurors, viz., Thomas le Ropere, John Fraunceys, "joygnour," Richard le Joygnour, John le Joygnour, Henry atte Ryole, Roger le Joygnour, Adam Snow, John May, Richard le Barber, William de Coumbe, Robert de Gildeford, and Adam the Clerk, say [inter alia] that the above Ralph Gubbe had no property in London; that Ralph the Clerk, of Beverley, had certain tenements in the parish of All Hallows on the Cellar; and that Adam Wade had a tenement in the parish of St. James de Garlekhethe, a house in the same parish called "le Bousishous," a tenement in Fletestrete, a quitrent of a tenement called "Menterhous"<sup>1</sup> in the same street, &c. They also say that neither Ralph de Beverley nor the executors of Adam Wade have any property in London.

Gate of Bridge : Roger de Durham.

Friday before the Feast of St. Margaret [20 July], 3 Edward II. [A.D. 1309], came Simon de Parys, Alderman, and his co-executors of the will of Margaret, wife of Hugh Pourte, before N[icholas] de Farndone, the Mayor, W[illiam] de Leyre, J[ohn] de Wenegrave, T[homas] Romeyn, G[oeffrey] de Conduit, W[illiam] Cosyn, John de Wyndesore, and many other Aldermen [not named], and offered to pay to John Frossh, "pessonner,"<sup>2</sup> in trust for Robert, Thomas, and John, sons of Johanna, wife of John le Benere and sister of the said Margaret, the sum of £9 bequeathed to her executors for the benefit of the said children.<sup>3</sup> And the said John Frossh, being present, refused to accept the money and declined to charge himself therewith. Thereupon came Robert de Mockyngge, fishmonger, and received the money with the assent of the Mayor and Aldermen, and agreed to improve (apprware) the money for the benefit of the said children, according to the Wednesday after the Feast of St. Faith [6 Oct.], 3 Edward II. [A.D. 1309], by the assent of the Mayor and Aldermen, Richard de "Wyrhale," Alderman, one of the executors of Mark de Christchurch, received from the hands of Roger Horold, his co-executor, the sum of £10 to traffic withal, and account for the profits of the same to the Mayor and Aldermen quo et quando, etc., for the benefit of Bartholomew, son of the aforesaid Mark.

(Afterwards, in the Husting for Common Pleas held on Monday after the Feast of St. Valentine [14 Feb.], 19 Edward II. [A.D. 1325-6], the said Bartholomew came before Hamo de Chigewell, Mayor, R[obert] de Swalclif, Ank[etin] de Gisorz, Elias de Suffolk, John Cotun, Reginald de Conduit, Henry de Secch[ford], John de Grantham, Roger le Palmere, and John de Oxford, Aldermen, and he was examined by the Court to prove his age. And it seemed to the Court that he was of full age for making an acquittance to the said Richard de Wirhale for the money in his custody. The said Richard should accordingly be altogether exonerated, &c. And he paid and is quit.)

Pleas before the Mayor and Aldermen, Monday after the Feast of St. Hillary [13 Jan.], 28 Edward I. [A.D. 1299-1300].

Peter de Monemuth attached to answer William Delisle in a plea for rendering him an account for the time that the said Peter was receiver of his moneys in London, for that the said William complains that whereas the said Peter was apprentice, and had in his custody of the goods and chattels of the said William to the value of £200, from the Feast of Easter, anno 27 Edward I., until the following Christmas, the said Peter had hitherto refused to render account thereof, whereby he says he is injured and has incurred loss to the amount of 100 marks, and this he offers, &c. And Peter came and defended the force and injury quando, etc., and acknowledged freely that he was the apprentice of the said William, and that he had certain goods and chattels of the said William in his custody, touching which he had rendered him a full account, and ought not now to render him an account, &c. And William says that for the time aforesaid no account had been rendered, and this he is prepared to prove in any way the Court desires (per quantum curia consideraverit). And Peter says, as before, that he had rendered an account, and he says that on that matter he will not put himself upon his country, &c. Being asked whether he had any evidence of having rendered his account, he says he has not, but he says it was sufficiently known to all of his craft (de officio suo) if he had dared put himself upon them. Being asked if he could find security for rendering an account, he says that he is unwilling to render another account. And the aforesaid William demands judgment, &c. And because the said Peter refused to render an account of what he had here acknowledged he had received, and had produced no proof that he had already rendered an account, but refused to produce the evidence demanded by the said William and to find security for his rendering a reasonable account, it is adjudged by the Mayor and Aldermen that he be committed to prison, &c.

Pleas before the Mayor and Aldermen, Wednesday after the Feast of St. Valentine [14 Feb.] the year aforesaid.

Thomas le Coffer attached to answer Robert de Keleseye in a plea of trespass, in which he (Robert) complains that whereas Adam de la Rose, "poter," had impleaded the said Thomas and others by a certain writ of right at a court held on Monday next after the Feast of St. Valentine, and the said Robert should have been counsel<sup>1</sup> (fuisse de consilio) for the said Adam in the aforesaid writ, the said Thomas had calumniated the said Robert in full Court, saying that he (Robert) knew his counsel (scire consilium suum) and ought to remain with him in this writ, and on that account he had previously paid him (Robert) 40 pence—to the scandal of the said Robert and to the loss of £100 in damage to him, and this he offers, &c. And the said Thomas came and defended the force and injury quando, etc., and said that he agreed with the said Robert for 40 pence that he (Robert) should be of his counsel (foret de consilio suo) in a certain writ of right which the said Thomas brought formerly in Court against the said Adam, and which concerned the same tenement and the same parties, and he (Robert) knew his counsel in the matter (inde scivit consilium suum). He further said that after he had recovered seisin of the said tenement, forthwith after dinner the said Robert went to the said Adam and counselled him to obtain the writ which Adam now brought against him, by which it seems to him that he (Robert) ought not to stand against him now in this case. And the aforesaid Robert freely acknowledged that he, at the instance of Gilbert de Toutheby, then servant of the said Thomas, at the first writ came on the day allowed the said Thomas for challenging the jury, on whom the said Thomas and Adam had put themselves, and by whose verdict the said Thomas recovered his seisin, but says that there never was any agreement between them that he should stand with the said Thomas (staret cum eo) in this writ, and this he is prepared to prove in any way the Court may desire. Wherefore, inasmuch as the said Thomas cannot deny that the said Robert had well and faithfully served him in the first writ, he (Robert) demands judgment, &c. And as to the statement by Thomas that immediately after judgment rendered he (Robert) counselled the said Adam to obtain this writ, he (Robert) says that although not bound to answer, yet, in order to purge his character, [he declares] himself not guilty, [and] puts himself upon his country, &c., of the venue (de visneto) of Frydaystrete and Chepe. And, as to this, Thomas likewise; and whereas the said Robert charges him with having said that Robert was of his counsel in this writ, he denies ever having said so, and thereon calls the record of the Mayor and Aldermen; and Robert likewise, &c. And the Mayor and Aldermen record that the said Thomas had charged the said Robert in full Court with having agreed to be of his counsel in this writ for 40 pence delivered, which the said Thomas now denied. It was adjudged that the said Thomas be convicted of trespass, &c.

Afterwards, at the Court of Pleas of Land held on Monday after the Feast of St. Matthias [24 Feb.], the year aforesaid, the parties came and were agreed, &c. And it was agreed that the aforesaid Thomas should pledge with the said Robert for the trespass aforesaid five casks of wine, of which the said Robert would take two casks whenever he wished, if it happened that the said Thomas should at any time in future commit another trespass against the said Robert, &c.

Pleas before the Mayor and Aldermen, Saturday after the Feast of St. Peter in Cathedra [22 Feb.], 28 Edward I. [A.D. 1299-1300]. Fo. cxviii b.

Geoffrey de Meilesant attached to answer John le Latimer in a plea that he should render an account for the time that he was receiver of the money of the said John, &c.; for that the said Geoffrey had in his custody the seal of the said John, and also other goods and chattels, as in money, florins, silver dishes and cups, &c., of the value of £40, of which he had not hitherto cared to render an account, whereby the plaintiff says he has been injured and has suffered loss to the extent of 50 marks, and this he offers, &c. And Geoffrey came and defended the force and injury quando, etc., and freely acknowledged that he had in his custody the aforesaid seal and also twenty-one gold florins and other goods and chattels of the said John; and he says that he has lost the said seal and florins, and is prepared to make satisfaction according to the judgment of the Court, &c.; and other goods of the said John which he had in his custody he had placed in the custody of a certain Ingeram de Colot de Whitsand<sup>1</sup> by his master's order. Being asked when he had lost the said ring, he says that it was on Saturday after the Feast of St. Valentine, &c. And John says that he ordered him to deliver certain goods and chattels of the value of 40 marks to the said Ingeram, but whether he (Geoffrey) did deliver them or not he (John) knows not, and he demands that the said Geoffrey shall give security for the chattels aforesaid if not delivered to the said Ingeram, and likewise for the restoration of the seal and florins, and also for keeping the said John harmless touching bonds and acquittances sealed with the aforesaid seal from the time the said Geoffrey received it, viz., from the morrow of St. Agnes [21 Jan.] this year until Saturday next before the Feast of St. Valentine, &c. And Geoffrey says that he is unable to find security. He is therefore committed to prison, &c., until Friday next; and the same day is given to the said John, &c.

Afterwards, at the Court held for Pleas of Land on Monday after the Feast of St. Matthias [24 Feb.] next ensuing, the said John came and agreed that the said Geoffrey should be delivered to a certain Bertram de Montbocher, Knt., at the risk of the said John, &c.; and he is delivered to the said Bertram by John's orders, and the Mayor, Sheriffs, and Court are quit.

Friday after the octave of H. Trinity [28 May], 29 Edward I. [A.D. 1301], Robert le Convers, goldsmith, summoned before Sirs William de Leyre and Walter de Finchingfeld, acting on behalf of Sir Elyas Russel, the Mayor, to answer Andrew, son of Clement le Cornour, in a plea of neglecting to render an account of the property of the said Andrew in his custody. The said Robert came and declared himself ready to render such an account. Nicholas Pycot, Alderman, and Stephen le Cornour de Fletestrete appointed auditors; a day given and account taken, whereby it appeared that the aforesaid Robert owed the sum of £20, which sum he delivered to the aforesaid Mayor and Alderman, who handed it to Walter de Finchingfeld, Alderman, under the seal of William de Leyre quousque, etc. The said Robert is accordingly quit.

Wednesday after the Feast of H. Trinity [24 May], 32 Edward I. [A.D. 1304], came William de Rede and Thomas de Suffolk, executors of Thomas de Oxford, into the Chamber of the Guildhall, before Walter de Finchingfeld and Thomas Romeyn, auditors appointed by the Mayor and Aldermen, to render an account of the goods they had received belonging to the children of the said Thomas de Oxford by will of the said Thomas, proved and enrolled in the Husting of London.<sup>1</sup> They confess themselves to be his executors, but they say that Isabella (now deceased), the wife of the aforesaid Thomas, afterwards married Henry called "de Bondone" (Boudone?), who took possession of the goods which came to her as the next friend of the orphans by the law and custom of the City; and they ask the aid of the Court that he might be summoned to answer with them for the goods. And a certain Thomas de Farndone, a friend of the children, who prosecutes on their behalf in the Court, objects, inasmuch as the said Henry was not an executor, and the executors alone ought to be responsible for the goods which they may be reasonably supposed to have received. The executors, however, declare that they never had received any goods, but that such goods were appropriated by the above Henry after the decease of the aforesaid Isabella. Under the circumstances the Mayor and Aldermen ordered the said Henry to be summoned, and he appeared on the eve of SS. Peter and Paul [29 June] with all rolls, tallies, &c., which he had in his possession. Being asked what became of the property left by the said Thomas de Oxford to his children, he declared that part had come into the hands of the aforesaid Isabella and part into his own hands. Thereupon the auditors find him liable to the orphans in the several sums of £33 and £67, and the Sheriffs are eventually ordered to take security of him quousque, etc.

Precept by John le Blunt, Mayor, to Peter de Bosenho, Sheriff of London, on Monday before the Feast of St. Margaret [20 July], 30 Edward I. [A.D. 1302], to take the body of William de Coringham and safeguard the same until the said William shall have paid to Alan de Neubiry the sum of 100*s.* due under a recognizance by form of statute [of merchants].

Monday before the Feast of St. James [25 July] next ensuing, return made by the Sheriff that the body of the said William was not found in his bailiwick.

Saturday after the Feast of St. Laurence [10 Aug.], another precept to the Sheriff to take the body of the said William, and to cause an extent and valuation to be made of the property belonging to the said William at the date of the recognizance.

Return made that, on Thursday before the Feast of St. Michael [29 Sept.], an inquest had been held by Richard de "Chingeford," Philip May, Walter le Taillour, John de Actone, Roger le Hattere, Richard Weyard, Robert de Campedene, Sampson le Orfevere, Richard de Fretone, John de Luttone, Richard le Rous, and Robert Lorchyn, who said on oath that the said William had no property except a shop held by Richard de "Chingelforde," and other property held by Edmund le Taillour and Roger de Wautham, the value of the whole amounting to 2*qs.* 6*d.*

<sup>1</sup> Montreuil (Pas de Calais). Gregory de Rokesle and other citizens set out for France, by the King's orders, "on the eve of the Feast of St. Margaret" (i. e., on Thursday, 19 July), in order to take part in the negotiations, on the third day after the Feast of St. Mary Magdalen (i. e., Wednesday, 25 July) at the latest, the treaty being actually concluded on the following Saturday (28th). This, at least, is the interpretation placed on the expression ad tardius, which appears in the record of their proceedings in the 'Liber de Antiquis' (Camd. Soc., p. 171), by the late Mr. Riley in his translation of the passage ('Chronicles of the Mayors and Sheriffs,' p. 176).

Monday after the Feast of St. Michael [29 Sept.], 32 Edward I. [A.D. 1304], precept issued to John de Lincoln and Roger de Parys, Sheriffs of London, to take the body of John le Lung, goldsmith, and safeguard the same until he shall have paid to William le Sautreour, minstrel to the Lady Margaret, Queen of England, the sum of £40, due under a recognizance.

Fo. cxxxii b.

*Preceptum
pro Gillelmo le

Return made that the body of John le Lung had been taken and committed to Neugate by John de Bureford and William de Combemartyn, late Sheriffs of London, for the above debt, and had been delivered to the present Sheriffs on the eve of Michaelmas last and was still detained in prison.

Another precept to keep the body of the said John, if a layman (si laicus foret), and to cause an extent and valuation to be made of his property at the date of the recognizance.

Return made that on Sunday the Feast of St. Valentine [14 Feb.], 33 Edward I. [A.D. 1304-5], an inquest had been held by William de Aldenham, John the Baker of Crepelgate, John de Parys, "seler," William de Horsham, Robert le Chaundler de Crepelgate, William de Kent, tailor, William de Harwe, William Dilhay, Roger Poyntel, Richard le Clerk, Gregory le Botoner, and Thomas de Derby, who said on oath that at the date of the recognizance the said John had property in the parish of St. Alphege within Crepelgate held by William de Aldenham, and the reversion of a tenement held by Alice, wife of John de Parys, "seler," for life. Seisin of the property was delivered to the said William in form aforesaid, &c.

Friday the morrow of St. Botolph [17 June], 33 Edward I. [A.D. 1305], precept issued to John de Lincoln and Roger de Paris, Sheriffs of London, to take the body of Henry Poteman, if a layman, and safeguard it until he shall have paid to Arnold Fokeram and Peter de Hospitali, merchants of "Caors," the sum of £34 due under a recognizance made before John le Blound, the Mayor, and Sir Henry de Leycestre, Clerk to the King, by form of statute of merchants.

Return made, non inventus,

Another precept to take his body and cause an extent and valuation to be made of his property within their bailiwick at the date of the recognizance.

Friday after the Feast of SS. Peter and Paul [29 June], return made that an inquest had been held by good men [names not given], who said on oath that the said Henry had four shops in London which had been given to him in frank marriage with Dyonisia his wife, but that previous to the recognizance he and his wife had demised the shops to Geoffrey Beauflour for a term of years, and seisin could not be given. Afterwards, viz., on Friday after the Feast of St. Bartholomew [24 Aug.], the said Geoffrey appeared on summons before John de Wengrave, the Mayor's locum tenens, and produced the lease. Thereupon it was adjudged that he [the debtor?] should take nothing until the expiration of the term.

pro Johannis
Barbitonsore.*

Wednesday the Feast of the Translation of St. Thomas the Martyr [7 July], 33 Edward I. [A.D. 1305], precept to the same Sheriffs to take the body of Elyas de Staundone, if a layman, and safeguard the same until he shall have paid to John de Wynchester, barber, the sum of £20 due under a recognizance made before John le Blound, the Mayor, and Sir Henry de Leycestre, Clerk to the King, by form of statute of merchants.

Return, non inventus.

Another precept to the Sheriffs to take his body and cause an extent and valuation to be made of his property at the date of the recognizance.

Return made that an inquest had been held by Richard Horn, "pessoner," Walter the Baker, Richard Horn, "ferroun," Henry atte Welle, John de Ebbegate, "barbur," Simon le Taillur, Henry de Haversham, cordwainer, John de Sandwych, William de Sandwych, William Pikeman, Thomas de Perdone, and William de Ware, who said on oath that at the date mentioned the said Elias had certain goods and chattels, value unknown, which had been sequestrated by the Sheriffs. They further said that he had a certain tenement in the parish of St. Laurence de Candelwykstrete held by Thomas de Northamptone and quitrent of a house in the parish of St. Botolph de Billingsgate held by Thomas de Perdone; and that they (the Sheriffs) delivered to the said John 7 marks on the day of the extent, to hold until he had levied the debt; and on the Feast of St. Bartholomew next ensuing they delivered to him the goods and chattels of the said Elias formerly sequestrated of the value of  $6\frac{1}{2}$  marks.

Saturday the morrow of St. Mark [25 April], 2 Edward II. [A.D. 1309], Peter de Sperham, Andrew de Staunford, John de Paris, "corder," Thomas Cross, Adam Braz, Richard Horn, fishmonger, [and] Robert de Pipeherst were elected by the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty to be auditors of the Chamberlain's account.

Thursday after the Feast of St. Michael [29 Sept.], 2 Edward II. [A.D. 1308], precept to James le Botiller and William de Basingge, Sheriffs of London, to take Richard Draweswerd, of Great Bentleyghe, co. Essex, if a layman, and keep him in prison until he should have satisfied Richer de Refham, Alderman, of the sum of £10 due under a recognizance made before the Mayor, &c., on Saturday after Easter, 1 Edward II., in form of statute merchants, and to make return on the following Monday. On which day the Sheriffs returned that they had attached the said Richard and committed him to Neugate prison, &c. And the said Richer came before Nicholas de Farndone, the Mayor, on Friday after the octave of St. Hillary next ensuing, and demanded that the goods and chattels, lands, rents, and tenements which were the property of the debtor at the date of the recognizance should be delivered to him by reasonable price and extent, according to the form of the statute aforesaid, because the debt remained unpaid. And forasmuch as it was found by the return of the Sheriffs that the said Richard stood in prison for a quarter of a year and more and had not paid the debt, precept was given them to cause the property of the debtor at the date of the recognizance to be delivered to the said Richer by reasonable price and extent, and to inform the Mayor in the Chamber of the Guildhall as to what they had done on Wednesday before the Purification. On which day the Sheriffs returned that they had caused an inquiry to be made by oath of William Bernard, John Baldewyne, Richard de Berkyng, Robert Gange, John Fissh, Thomas le Taillur, Richard atte Vyne, Robert le Cuver, Olyver Bennyng, John de Lenham, Laurence Albyn, [and] William Smart, and they had found that the said Richard had no property except a small ship, a broken boat, and an anchor and sail and other utensils appertaining to the said ship, of the value of 100s., which were delivered to the said Richer according to the statute, &c.

Monday after the Feast of St. James [25 July], 8 Edward II. [A.D. 1314], came Nicholas, son of Hamo le Paumer, before Nicholas de Farendone, the Mayor, and the Aldermen in full Husting for Pleas of Land, and demanded that the sum of £60 in the custody of William de Causton should be delivered to him, as he was of full age and had completed the term of his apprenticeship.<sup>1</sup> And the said William came, and paid the money and received an acquittance for the same, as also for the sum of 25 marks which came to him (Nicholas) on the death of his brother Edward.

In Roll xix. of King Edward—

The citizens of London render account of 20,000 marks for a fine, as is contained in Roll 50. In the Treasury nihil.

To the Counts of Boulogne and St. Paul for expenses which the said counts incurred in the City of London in the time of King Henry, £383 8s. 5d., as is contained in Roll xix. in London. And in the Wardrobe of the said King Henry of the fine aforesaid £673 6s. 8d., as is contained in the account of Nicholas de Leukenore, Keeper of the Wardrobe aforesaid, from Friday next after the Feast of St. Peter ad Vincula [1 Aug.], anno 49 Henry, until the 3rd day of March, anno 52 of the same King, in Roll lv. And in the same Wardrobe of King Henry of the aforesaid fine by the hands of Richard de Ewelle and Hugh de Turri, buyers for the Wardrobe of the said King, £545, as is therein contained.

And to Edward the present King, the eldest son of King Henry, in the fiftieth year of King Henry, before the said Edward became King, of the fine aforesaid 800 marks by writ of the now King, dated 8 Sept., anno 18, whereby the said King commands the Treasurer and Barons (after auditing the account of the citizens of London touching those 20,000 marks which they made fine to King Henry his father for trespass which they were said to have committed against the said King Henry at the time of the last war in the realm of England) to make due allowances in the Exchequer to the said citizens touching disbursements made on behalf of the said King Henry and the King that now is, and in the meantime to allow the citizens to have peace therein. To Alianora, late Queen of England, consort of King Henry aforesaid, for the expenses of herself and family in the fiftieth and fifty-first years of the said King, £700, by the same writ and three writs of King Henry and letters patent of the said Queen, testifying the receipt of the money. To John de Warren, Earl of Surrey, by gift of King Henry out of the fine aforesaid, the said fiftieth year, 200 marks by the said writ and the writ of King Henry aforesaid and the letters patent of the said Earl, testifying the receipt of the money. To William de Valence, brother of the said King Henry, for the said Edward, son of the said King, of the aforesaid fine in the fiftieth year, 400 marks by the said writ, &c. To Albert, Duke of Brummeswyk, cousin of the said King, for his expenses in the City of London in the same year, 1,000 marks by the said writ, &c. To the aforesaid Edward, now King, to whom the aforesaid King Henry his father gave 10,000 livres tournois to assist him in certain most urgent business the same year, being part of 30,000 livres tournois which the said King Henry provided out of the aforesaid fine of the citizens, and with their counsel, to be paid to Louis, King of the French—in part payment of the said 10,000 livres tournois, 400 marks, by the said writ and writ patent of the aforesaid Henry and two letters patent, under the seal of the said Edward which he used before he became King, testifying the receipt of the money. To Ralph Pacy and Ivo de Bretoun, citizens of Paris, in part payment of the aforesaid 10,000 livres tournois granted to the said Edward, 500 livres sterling, the said fiftieth year, by the said writ, &c. To Henry Campyun for barley purchased of him, £6 12s., in part payment of the 10,000 livres tournois aforesaid, by the said writ, &c. To the same Henry Campyun [and] Jordan Dygun, in part payment of the said 10,000 livres tournois for barley taken from them for the use of the said Edward, now King, in the fifty-first year of the said King Henry, £52 8s. 8d. by the said writ, &c. To Thomas de Ipegrave, Knt., in part payment of the said 10,000 livres tournois, the fifty-second year, 170 marks by the said writ, &c. To Hugh de Creky, Knight of the said Edward, for arrears of his fee in part payment of the aforesaid 10,000 livres, the said fifty-second year, £80 by the said writ and letters patent of the said Edward and letters patent of James de Hamello, attorney to the said Hugh, testifying, &c. To William de Hadestoke and Bartholomew de Castro, attorneys ad hoc of the said Edward, in part payment of the said 10,000 livres in the fifty-first year, 135 marks by the said writ, &c. To William de Monterville (Monte Revelli), valet of the said Edward, for money lent the said Edward by the said William in the fifty-second year, in part payment of the said 10,000 livres, £46 by the said writ, &c. To the said Edward, in part payment, &c., in the fifty-first year, £20, which the said Edward caused to be delivered to the Count of St. Paul by the same writ, &c. To Nicholas de Lyouns, burgess of Douay, for a debt due to the said burgess, in part payment, &c., in the fifty-second year, £442 by the said writ, &c. To William de Lyanne, Knight of the said Edward, for the fee of the said William, in part payment, &c., in the fifty-second year, £19 by the said writ and letters patent of the said Edward and of Reginald de Lyanne, attorney of the said William, testifying the delivery and receipt of the said money. To Walter de Capell (?), for wines taken for the use of the said Edward by the King in the fifty-second year, in part payment, &c., £12 13s. 4d. by the said writ, &c. To Agnes, wife of John Veyllard de Whitsand, in part payment of the value of £58 9s. 4d. parisis<sup>1</sup> in the fifty-second and fifty-fourth years, 12 marks by the said writ, in part payment of the said 10,000 livres tournois by letters patent of the said Edward and Baron de Pelan, attorney of the said Agnes, testifying, &c. To William "Lavener" of Cant[erbury?], for bread and wheat taken of him for the use of the Count of St. Paul in the fifty-second year, in part payment of the said 10,000 livres, £8 19s. 6d. by the said writ, &c. Transcript of letter sent to the lord the King by the Barons of his Exchequer, the last day of October, 29 Edward I. [A.D. 1301], enrolled in the Exchequer, in the Roll of Memoranda, the same term.

To the most excellent Prince, &c., the Treasurer and Barons of his Exchequer, &c. Your serenity lately commanded us to audit the account of your citizens of London touching those 20,000 marks which they made fine with the late King Henry, your father, for trespass which they were said to have committed against him at the time of the war, and to make due allowances to the said citizens for deliveries, payments, and costs which they made by letters of your said father and yourself in your said Exchequer to be shown to us, and that other deliveries, payments, and costs which they likewise made by precept of your said father and yourself, not comprising allowances, should be placed in view of the said account, and be openly and distinctly made apparent to you under the seal of your Exchequer aforesaid. Wherefore may your revered highness know that at the quinzaine of St. Michael last past the aforesaid citizens came before us at your Exchequer aforesaid by their attorneys, and touching diverse deliveries and payments made in the time of your aforesaid father, we allowed the said citizens of the fine aforesaid, as well by letters of your said father as by your own, sealed with the seal you used before you undertook the government of the realm—£5,993 8s. 7d., and so there remains of the said fine £7,339 18s. 1d., of which there are placed in view £5,000 for 20,000 livres tournois, which equal in value £5,000 sterling, which sum the citizens of the said City, in the time of your aforesaid father, by purveyance (?) of his counsel and that of the said citizens, paid at Paris to Louis, King of the French, by letters of the same touching the receipt of the same, dated Paris, the quinzaine of Easter, A.D. 1266, and letters patent of your aforesaid father, dated the fiftieth year of his reign, which letters the aforesaid attorneys have not shown to us, whereby we have not made an allowance to them of the sum aforesaid, inasmuch as no mention is made in the said letters of your father of a precept of your said father for paying the said sum to the aforesaid King of the French, but touching the purveyance (?) aforesaid, however, the said letters of your father remain in the Exchequer, because by them the sum of 10,000 livres paid to you is now allowed to the said citizens besides the 20,000 livres aforesaid paid to the King of the French. And £120 which the said citizens delivered to Roger de Leyburne for expenses incurred on fortifying Rochester Castle in the forty-eighth year of the reign of your father by his writ patent. And 20 marks which they delivered to the said Roger for expenses incurred in the service of your father by another writ patent. And 1,030 marks which they delivered to William de Euerwyk and his fellow-merchants of Ghent by writ of your father. And £84 which they delivered to Eustace Bricoun by your letter patent, sealed with the seal you used before you became King. And £17 which they delivered to Gervase le Rous de Bruges, merchant, by another writ of the same seal. And £18 3s. 4d. which they delivered to John Waterkyn by a third writ of the same seal. Of these deliveries we have not made allowance to the said citizens, because their attorneys did not show us the letters of the aforesaid Roger, William, Eustace, Gervase, and John, or any of them, touching the receipt of the said sums or any of them. And £532 5s. 8d. which Roger de "Maritania" [Moreteyn], Knt., in the time of your father and by his mandate, received in parts of Flanders of the goods of London citizens after your father had granted the said citizens repossession of their goods and chattels which had been seized in those parts by reason of the disturbance then existing in the realm of England, as appears by letters patent of Margaret, then Countess of Flanders, directed to your aforesaid father thereon which the said attorneys have shown to us, and which we have not allowed because they have not shown us another writ of your father or of yourself thereon. And £209 6s. 8d. which the said citizens paid, as they say, in your father's time, to John Walraund for fortifying the Tower of London in full discharge of 500 marks by writ of your said father which was shown to us by the said attorneys, and which remains in your Exchequer, whereby we allowed only 186 marks out of the 500 marks aforesaid because that writ supposes a preceding writ as to the residue, which the attorneys did not show us, and also because they did not show us the letters patent of the said John touching the receipt of the whole aforesaid sum. And £633 13s. 2d. which the said citizens, by seven writs of your father in the accounts (?) for the fifty-first and fifty-second years of his reign, shown to us by the said attorneys, delivered to divers servants of your father, both horsemen and footmen, upon their wages (vadiis), and also to the guardians of the works at the Tower of London for the same; also to Reginald de Suffolk and Gregory de Rokesle of the gift of your father, and to John Walraund for money which he paid to Reymund Makayn, merchant, for your said father, for which money we have not made allowance to the aforesaid citizens, forasmuch as their attorneys have not shown to us the letters of the aforesaid servants, wardens, Reginald, Gregory, and John, or any of them, for the receipt of the said money or any part of it; and further, because the counter-writs (contrabrevia) of the said writs, without which we cannot make an allowance, are in your Treasury at Westminster. And £42 6s. of a certain sum of £50 6s. paid to a certain Agnes, who was wife of John le Weybard, by your letter, sealed with your aforesaid seal, whereby we allowed the said citizens in their fine aforesaid only £8 out of the aforesaid sum, and for the remaining £42 6s. we made no allowance, inasmuch as the said attorneys showed us only the letter of the said Agnes acknowledging the payment of £8 of the sum aforesaid.

Thereupon the citizens of London made petition to the lord the King and his Council, and gave up the aforesaid record under the seal of the Exchequer in his Parliament held at Westminster in the octave of St. John the Baptist, in the thirtieth year of his reign [A.D. 1302]. And answer was made ut patet in alia parte huius folii.

On the petition of the citizens of London asking that full allowance might be made to them for 20,000 marks in which the said citizens were sometime bound to King Henry, the father of the present King, forasmuch as it was ordained and commanded by the present King and his Council that an account of the said 20,000 marks should be audited and due allowance made to them thereon, by which mandate the said citizens rendered the aforesaid account before the Treasurer and the Barons of the Exchequer of the said lord the King in the quinzaine of St. Michael last past. For which money the said Treasurer and Barons have not made full allowance to the said citizens, as appears by a certain record sent to the King by the Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer in these words:—

To which the following answer was made:—

The King desires that the £5,000 sterling for 20,000 livres tournois paid to the King of France by purveyance (?) made by the King's counsel and that of the citizens of London should be allowed the said citizens, notwithstanding no mention being made of the King's precept, because the purveyance (?) made and the King's counsel suffice for the precept; moreover, the letters of the King of the French acknowledge that he received the said sum of money. Also the King wills that the £532 5s. 8d. paid to Roger de "Maritania," Knt., by command of King Henry and by letters of the Countess of Flanders which acknowledge the payment, notwithstanding that they did not show the King's writ thereon, [shall be allowed], inasmuch as the King remembers that he was bound to the said Roger in certain debts for which certain jewels had been delivered to him, which jewels the said Roger afterwards restored to the King, and he knows for certain that by that payment the jewels were restored, and from no other cause. And as touching all other articles which are not clear, the King wills that the Treasurer and Barons shall audit them, and after scrutiny of the accounts of those who ought to have received the money, and everything else whereby they can be certified, allow the said citizens all that shall be found clear. And as to the residue, let the Mayor and citizens make some certain fine to the Exchequer such as the said Treasurer and Barons shall deem fit to be made to the King's profit, and mandate be given to the Treasurer and Barons by writ of the Chancellor.

The King to his Barons of the Exchequer greeting. Allow to the citizens of our City of London in those 20,000 marks in the aforesaid Exchequer—which the citizens of the said City formerly made fine with the lord Henry, late King of England, our father, for a trespass they were said to have committed against our said father in the time of the war, and which are exacted from them by summons of the said Exchequer—£5,000 sterling for those 20,000 livres tournois which the said citizens, by purveyance (?) of our father's counsel and that of the said citizens, paid to Louis, late King of the French, in our said father's name. And receive from them as well the letters of our said father testifying to the said purveyance (?) as the letters patent of the aforesaid Louis testifying to the receipt of the said 20,000 livres tournois. Witness ourself at Keningtone, 23 August, anno 30 [A.D. 1302].

Similar writ to the same for making allowance of the sum of £532 5s. 8d., which Roger de Moreteyn, Knt., had received in parts of Flanders of the goods of the citizens. Dated ut supra.

Writ to the same for due allowances to be made in the City's accounts of the above 20,000 marks for disbursements made on behalf of the King and his father, and for exacting a suitable fine for the residue. Dated ut supra.

The King to the Sheriffs of London greeting. We command you to levy the sum of £1,807 12s. 5d. on the goods and chattels, lands and tenements of the citizens of the said City in your bailiwick, which sum they owe to us as the balance of those 20,000 marks which the citizens aforesaid made fine with the lord Henry of good memory, late King of England, our father, for a trespass which they were said to have committed against our said father at the time of the war, after allowances made to the said citizens lately at our Exchequer by our Treasurer and Barons of the said Exchequer, and also further granted in our last Parliament at Westminster by us and by our counsel. So that you have the said money ready to be paid to us in our Exchequer aforesaid, at York, on the morrow of St. Martin; but if we shall find you tardy or remiss in levying the said money, we shall visit you and yours with the gravest punishment as treating our commands with contempt. And have this writ there and then. Witness, W. de Carleton at York, 1 Oct., 30 Edward I. [A.D. 1302].

[Here follows one of the transcripts (noted supra, p. 228) of the account of the citizens of London touching the sum of 20,000 marks and allowances thereon.]

The Prior and Convent of Holy Trinity, London, owe for the house which Isabella de St. Alban inhabits near Ismongerelane, in the Chepe of London, by the year on St. Margaret's Day, 8s.

Richard (Robert?) de Meldebourne owes by the year for the garden near London Wall, near Aldresgate towards Crepelgate, at Easter Eve, as is contained in the roll of wills, anno 4 Edward [I.],<sup>1</sup> 12*d.*

Johanna Goldcorn, late wife of Bartholomew the Smith (fabri), owes for the rent late belonging to the said Bartholomew without Ludgate on the north side, by the year, at Easter, 5s.

(Afterwards, on the death of Johanna Goldcorn,<sup>2</sup> two shops came into the hand of the City, from which shops the said 5s. first issued; for which shops William le Coteler rendered for one shop 18s., and Richard le Cordewaner 18s. Now William le Coteler holds one of the said shops for 20s., and a certain capper holds the other for 20s., beginning at Michaelmas, anno 7 [Edward II.]. Afterwards by the Mayor and Commonalty these two shops were granted to John de Paris and his heirs for 10s.

<sup>1</sup> The will of a Robert de Meldeburn, who died possessed of property in the parish of St. Giles, Cripplegate, was proved and enrolled in the Court of Husting, anno 14 Edward I. [A.D. 1285]. 'Cal. of Wills,' i. 74.

Possibly the discrepancy of date may be an error of the scribe.

a year, to be paid into the Chamber, and 20s. to the Prebendary of Fynesbere, and he has the deed of the Commonalty thereon.)

(On a cedula attached to the folio there is a copy of a conveyance by Henry le Waleys, the Mayor, and Commonalty of the City to Johanna Goldcorn, relict of Bartholomew the Smith, of a house lately held by the said Bartholomew near Ludgate, at an annual rent of 10s., the grantors reserving their right over the house in time of war. Dated Thursday after the Feast of H. Trinity [1 June], 26 Edward I. [A.D. 1298].)

Johanna Goldcorn aforesaid owes for the house which formerly was a workshop (fabrica) without Ludgate on the south side, by the year, at the four terms, 10s.

(Now the heirs of Henry Sprot hold the aforesaid tenement.)

Richard Jordan and Beatrice his wife owe for a certain tenement without Ludgate over the City's foss, by the year, at Easter and Michaelmas, 10s.

Of the house formerly of Warin le Oynter in Basseshawe, by the year, for quitrent, which house John de Bacwelle now holds, 3s.

Of a house formerly belonging to Cok Bateman, a Jew, in Ladelane, which Matilda de Kellevedene now holds by the year, for quitrent, 4s.

Of houses of Bedleem without Bisshopesgate for quitrent, by the year, at the four terms, 20s.

Of a shop formerly belonging to Roger le Chaundeler in the Chepe of London, near the Church of St. Thomas de Acon, for quitrent, at Easter and Michaelmas, 13s. 4d.

Of the same shop to the Mayor of London, by the year, at Michaelmas, 13s. 4d.

Of a certain shop of Richard de Mounpelers in the Spicery (Speciaria), in the Chepe of London, for quitrent, by the year, for the maintenance of a certain chantry in St. Paul's for the soul of Henry de Gildeford,<sup>1</sup> 20s.

<sup>1</sup> His will, whereby he devotes the whole of his property in London to the maintenance of three chantries in St. Paul's, was enrolled in the Husting, anno 6 Edward II. 'Cal. of Wills, Court of Hust., London,' i. 233. See also 'Ninth Report, &c. Hist. MSS. Com.' (1883), pp. 46 b, 55 b.

Of the houses formerly of William Milksop without Aldresgate, by the year, at the four terms, 8s.

(Now William le Chaundeler holds the same house for 20s. a year, beginning at Easter, anno 5 [Edward II.], inasmuch as Constance, who was the wife of William Milksop while he lived, had of the same house 8s., which came into the hand of the City after the decease of the said Constance.)

Of a solar and shop at the gate of the Guildhall, by the year, 16s. (now 20s.).

Ralph Pecok pays by the year for the moor of Bedleem, at Michaelmas, 8s. mortuus est.

Ralph Pecok pays by the year for the moor which John de Stebenhethe held [blank].

Of Sir John Tanne, Knt., for houses within Bischopgate, by the year, 20s.

Of the ferm of the Small Balance by the year, 100s. Now Richard de Redyngge holds it for 50s. at the instance of Ingelard de Warle, beginning at the Feast of SS. Philip and James, anno 6 [Edward II.].<sup>1</sup>

Of the ferm of the moor,<sup>2</sup> by the year, 40s.

Of the wharf of St. Botolph (ut patet supra in cedula ad hoc signum<sup>3</sup>), £10.

John le Wallere holds a small place without Alegate near the foss, in a certain small house called "Loge," 12 feet long and 7 feet broad, by grant of John de Gysors, Mayor, &c., for 12*d.*, by the year; and he is bound to repair the roadway under the gate of Alegate at his own expense, &c. Beginning at Easter, anno 6 [Edward II.].

The same John holds a turret adjoining Alegate, which Henry le Wake inhabits, for 10s. by the year, beginning at Easter, the year aforesaid.

<sup>1</sup> The Small Beam had been granted to him in 1310 at an annual ferm of £10, but half the ferm was remitted at the King's request. In 1313 the ferm was reduced to 50s. Letter-Book D, fo. civ b.

Tuesday after the Feast of Conversion of St. Paul [25 Jan.], 35 Edward I. [A.D. 1306-7], precept by John le Blound, Mayor, to Geoffrey de Conduit and Simon Bolet, Sheriffs of London, to take the body of Walter le Mazerer, son of Luke le Ayller, deceased, if a layman, and safeguard it until he shall have paid to William de Writele the sum of £22 due under a recognizance made before the said Mayor and Sir Henry de Leycestre, clerk of the King, by form of statute of merchants, on Monday before the Feast of St. Nicholas [6 Dec.], 35 Edward I. Thereupon another precept to take his body and cause an extent and valuation to be made of all his property at the date of the recognizance, in whose hands soever it may be other than an heir under age to whom it may have come by hereditary succession, &c. Return made to the effect that they could not take the body of the said Walter because he was not found within their bailiwick; that they found goods and chattels in his house of the value of 10 marks, and had caused them to be valued at that sum by the oath of Henry de Fonte, James le Reve, Walter Gobbe, Gilbert de Mordone, John Lucas, William Hardel, Henry le Whyte, William de Ware, Edmund Lambyn, Eustace le Cotiller, Robert de Borham, and Ralph de Storteford, and the money had been delivered to William de Writele in part payment of the debt; that as to the lands, rents, and tenements which the debtor owned at the date of the recognizance, the aforesaid jurors said that he owned a house in the parish of St. Michael, now tenanted by John de Blibury, of the value of 8 marks by the year; a shop, tenanted by William de Braye, of the value of 40s. by the year; another shop, tenanted by John Lucas, of the value of 24s. by the year; a solar at Oystergate, tenanted by John le Loung, of the value of 9s. by the year; and another solar, tenanted by William de Braye, of the value of 1 mark; and that he had 18s. quitrent of the house of John Lucas;—total £10 11s., from which must be deducted £6 17s. 8d. due to the chief lords of the fee, and 1 mark a year for the maintenance of the said houses, and so they are worth quit by the year 60s. Of which lands, rents, and tenements the said Sheriffs delivered seisin to the said William, on Sunday after the octave of the Purification [2 Feb.], 35 Edward I. [A.D. 1306-7], to hold as frank tenement until the residue of the aforesaid debt be levied, &c.

Mayor, to John de Lincoln and Roger de Parys, Sheriffs of London, to take the body of John le Loung, son of Roger le Loung, if a layman, and safeguard it until he shall have paid to Master Reginald de Brandone, Canon of St. Paul's, the sum of 45 marks due under a recognizance made before the afore-said Mayor and Sir Henry de Leycestre, clerk of the King, on Saturday before Christmas, 26 Edward I. [A.D. 1297], by form of statute of merchants. Return made that they had taken the said John and committed him to Neugate. And because the said John stood in prison for half a year and more, and had not paid the debt, precept was issued to Reginald de Thunderle and William Cosyn, Sheriffs of London, by the same Mayor, on Thursday the Feast of St. Martin [11 Nov.], 33 Edward I. [A.D. 1305], to cause an extent and valuation to be made of all the debtor's property within their bailiwick at the date of the recognizance, in whose hands soever it be found other than, &c. Return made that they had caused an inquiry to be held on oath by William le Chaundeler, Adam de Derlington, Hugh le Taverner, Robert de Wellested, Robert de Pampesworth, William le Taverner, "chaucer," John Wynebaud, barber, William Dilhay, "chaundeler," Dyonisius le Orfevere, William de Harwe, William de Kent, "taillur," and William de Aldenham, who found that on the day named the said John le Loung had in the parish of St. Mary le Bow a tenement and shops, now tenanted by Alan de Suttone, "seler," as security for 100 marks, of the clear yearly value of 6 marks; also in the parish of St. Alpege within Crepilgate three messuages and ten shops, together with an annual rent of 12*s.* issuing from a tenement held by John le Pestour, the whole of the clear yearly value of £6 5*s.* 4*d.*; of which property one of the messuages is held by William de Aldenham for a term of years at 9*s.* a year, and the other two messuages and shops by Guillot le Sautreour for £40, in which sum the said John was bound to the said Guillot by form of the New Statute. All which tenements were delivered to Master Reginald de Brandone on Sunday after the Feast of St. Edmund, K. [20 Nov.], 34 Edward I. [A.D. 1305], to hold as frank tenement until the debt be levied, except the tenements held by Guillot le Sautreour by form of the New Statute as aforesaid.

Wednesday after the Feast of the Purification B. M. [2 Feb.], 34 Edward I. [A.D. 1305-6], precept by John le Blound, Mayor, to William Cosin and Reginald de Thunderle, Sheriffs of London, to take the body of Ralph de Honilane, citizen and Alderman of London, if a layman, and safeguard the same until he shall have paid to John de Wengrave the sum of £60 due under two recognizances by form of statute of merchants made before the said Mayor and Sir Henry de Leycestre, clerk of the King, on Friday after the Feast of St. Faith [6 Oct.], 32 Edward I. [A.D. 1304], and on Monday before the Feast of St. Bartholomew [24 Aug.], 33 Edward I. [A.D. 1305], as set forth. Return made, non inventus. Thereupon another precept to take the body of the said Ralph and cause an extent and valuation to be made of his property at the date of the several recognizances, in whose hands soever it may have come other than, &c. Return made, non inventus, and that he had no goods or chattels whereon the debt could be levied; and further that they caused an extent and valuation to be made of his tenements and rents within their bailiwick by the oath of Alan de Suffolk, John de Berdene, John de Vaus, Henry Monquey, Adam Mulgar, Richard le Joynur, William de Medelane, William Ace, William le Gras, John Fraunceys, "joynur," Roger le Paumer, senior, and Roger de Arcubus, who found that the said Ralph had in the Vintry in the parish of St. James two messuages of the yearly value of £18, from which must be subtracted 100s. annual rent owing to Richard le Vielour, and 20s. annual rent due to St. Giles's Hospital, and 40s. annually for repairs; and so the said tenements are of the clear yearly value of £10, and they have been delivered to John de Wengrave to hold as a frank tenement until, &c.

Edward, &c., to the Mayor and Sheriffs of London, greeting. On behalf of Gauselm Bonet, merchant of Bordeaux, it has been shown to us that whereas Ralph de Honilane, citizen of London, is bound to the said Gauselm in £12, by recognizance made in the said City according to the form of our statute put forth at Acton Burnel,<sup>1</sup> which money he ought to have paid the said Gauselm on the Feast of the Nativity of our Lord last past and has not paid it; and whereas the said Gauselm has caused to be produced and delivered by "Amanenus" de Bessoun, his servant, after the aforesaid Feast, letters patent, sealed with our seal ordained for such recognizances in the City aforesaid,<sup>2</sup> and also the seal of the said Ralph, touching the said debt for taking the said Ralph, then found in the City aforesaid, and committing him to prison according to the form of the statute aforesaid until he shall have satisfied the said Gauselm of the said debt, you, although you took the said Ralph for this matter and committed him to prison, have nevertheless set him free from prison although satisfaction has not been made to the said Gauselm for the said debt, and have detained, moreover, the said letters patent from the said "Amanenus" in your possession, to the no small hurt of the said Gauselm and contrary to the form of the statute aforesaid:—We therefore command that if, after consulting the said statute, you find that something has been done that is not in accordance with its provisions, you cause the same to be revoked on behalf of the said merchant, and such a full measure of justice be done to him that it will not behove us to lay to our hand in another manner on his behalf owing to your default. Witness ourself at Winchester, 10 May, the thirty-fourth year of our reign [A.D. 1306]. And because it appeared to the aforesaid Mayor and Sheriffs that the aforesaid Gauselm was dead, and the aforesaid "Amanenus" produced nothing to show that he was his (Gauselm's) executor or attorney, &c., the aforesaid letter of statute was delivered to the Chamber of the Guildhall on Monday before the Feast of St. Dunstan [19 May], the same year, until, &c.

Friday before the Feast of St. Martin [11 Nov.], 1 Edward II. [A.D. 1307], precept by John le Blound, Mayor, to Nicholas Pycot and Nigel Drury, Sheriffs of London, to take the body of Ralph de Honilane, vintner, if a layman, and safeguard it until he shall have paid to Richard de Dorsete, corder, the sum of £19 due under a recognizance made before the said Mayor and Sir Henry de Leycestre, clerk of the King, by form of statute of merchants, on Friday after the Feast of Nativity B. M. [8 Sept.], 33 Edward I. [A.D. 1305]. Return made that the said Ralph was a cleric, and as such had already been released from prison, and therefore they could not take him. Thereupon another precept to the same to cause an extent and valuation to be made of his property at the date of the recognizance, into whose hands soever it may have come, other than an heir under age possessed of it by hereditary succession, by the oath of twelve good and lawful men, &c. Return made that they had caused an inquiry to be made of such property by the oath of Walter de Herlestede, William de Honilane, taverner, John Poyntel,
